Income Tax Case Reveals Numbers Background

Former Operator Quit in 1944; Now Owns Four Houses, $23,000 in Bonds

By Frank Wilder
Post Reporter

Baltimore, Md., June 16.—The trial of a Washington man on income tax evasion charges here brought out today that he was a numbers operator in the District, doing a business of $1,600,000 in three years during and before the war.

Elbe C. Bettis, 37, of 1323 Hamlin st. ne., told Baltimore District Court Judge W. Calvin Chesnut he quit the business in 1944, and now owns four houses, including a 39-unit apartment house, a Cadillac, and about $23,000 worth of United States bonds.

A well-dressed, six-footer with two years of high school education, Bettis went on trial this morning under an indictment charging that for the years 1941-42-43 he earned $97,000 clear, but reported only $48,000 of it in his tax returns.

The estimate of Bettis' gross numbers business during the three years was made in court by his own attorney, who produced his client's records of that business to show there had been no intended tax evasions.

Judge Chesnut is expected to deliver a verdict Thursday following final arguments by Defense Attorney G. C. A. Anderson and Assistant U. S. Attorney James F. Morrow, jr. The judge and the prosecutor agreed that the case should be heard without a jury on Anderson's contention that a jury, hearing only the tax charges, might be prejudiced against Bettis because he is a Negro and was a numbers operator.

Bettis' defense against the tax indictment, handed up here last February 17, was that he handled so much money daily that errors may have been made in figuring his income.

The defendant blamed much of his income-tax troubles on the fact that he could not keep full receipts from his lottery business; could not list his customers' names, even those whose selections "hit," and was obliged to move his headquarters frequently because police were "after" him.

He testified that Treasury Department agents knew as early as 1938 that he was in the numbers business.

"Well, it's certainly surprising to me," the judge commented, "that, with this knowledge that you were in an illegal business,

State Officials Named

4 Men and 2 Organizations Indicted on Lobbying Charges

Tom Linder | James McDonald | Ralph Moore
Accused of lobbying without registering

Two State Commissioners of Agriculture were among four men and two organizations indicted by the District grand jury yesterday on charges of criminal conspiracy and of violating the law to regulate lobbying.

The indictment came after several months of investigation by the FBI and presentation of evidence for six weeks by a squad of special assistants to the Attorney General. Those indicted were:

James E. McDonald, Commissioner of Agriculture of Texas;

Tom Linder, Commissioner of Agriculture of Georgia;

Ralph W. Moore, of Granger, Tex., whose home in Washington is 1620 Fuller st. nw., and who has offices at 1707 N st. nw.

Robert N. Harriss, senior partner of the cotton brokerage firm of Harriss and Vose, New York City.

The National Farm Committee, a Texas corporation headed by Linder, with Moore as secretary.

The Farm Commissioners Council, an unincorporated group whose principal officials are Linder and McDonald.

The grand jury charged in the indictment that McDonald and Linder appeared on the surface to be acting in their official capacities as State commissioners of agriculture, but were in fact engaged in lobbying for laws that would increase commodity prices for their own personal gain, and were speculating in commodities concerning which they were putting pressure on Congress.

The offense charged was failure to register as lobbyists as the Regulation of Lobbying Act requires. The indictment charged that all the indicted organizations and individuals wilfully and knowingly failed to file their registrations.

The conspiracy count of the indictment alleged that the individual defendants maintained personal commodity accounts, which gave them a personal, financial interest in maintaining higher commodity prices. The grand jury charged that the individual defendants agreed that Moore would lobby in favor of legislation which would increase commodity prices, and that he would not register as a lobbyist because his registration

New Strikes Grip France, 600 Injured

50,000 Workers Out; Pitched Battles Rage; Planes Land Troops; 'Outside' Plot Seen

Clermont-Ferrand, France, June 16 (AP).—A new strike wave gripped parts of France tonight and showed signs of mushrooming after pitched battles between police and strikers here injured 600 persons.

An estimated 50,000 persons were striking here and elsewhere by nightfall.

In this French tire capital, continuing clashes between 30,000 Communist-led strikers and thousands of police and soldiers have sent about 200 persons to hospitals. Another 400 persons injured in police-strikers battles here since midnight have been treated in their homes.

The French press said 300 persons have been arrested here.

Reports of two deaths here could not be confirmed.

More trouble is expected tonight, but there has been no shooting so far.

[The United Press reported that Pierre Bertaux, emergency governor of the strike area, blamed "outside influences" for the violence. "I have proof of premeditation . . . there are other people behind the actual strikers."]

Troops Flown In

Police and soldiers are patrolling the streets. Another 10 plane loads of troops are expected here soon.

A veteran government observer called the situation grave. The National Assembly in Paris suspended its afternoon session in a flurry of excitement as Communists tried to bring the strike issue to the floor.

Premier Robert Schuman's government was threatened with collapse if it failed to maintain order. Jules Moch, Minister of Interior, was sending police and soldier reinforcements to several threatened industrial areas tonight.

The threat of a general strike hung over this city, heart of what the United States Embassy calls a "Red belt." The Communist-dominated General Confederation of Labor ordered workers here to leave their jobs this morning.

This action came after police battled with strikers who had held the Berougnan tire factory in a sitdown strike. The strikers won the first pitched battle last night but lost the second when police, strengthened by state troopers and mounted Republican Guards, ejected them from the plant this morning.

Strikers Use Acid Bomb

Bombs thrown by the strikers contained acid. Others contained a substance which government agencies are examining for evidences of mustard gas.

Officials said more than 80 policemen were blinded at least temporarily.

The strikers also used slingshots to hurl ball bearings.

Police strung barbed wire around the plant. Associated Press Photographer Jean Jacques Levy was beaten up by about 20 state police. His camera was destroyed. Police then tore up the film packs in his kit and destroyed even the unexposed negatives.

Police held the Berougnan plant tonight but the Michelin rubber plant, which employs 30,000 workers, was in the hands of strikers.

Sympathy strikes spread quickly in south central and northeastern France. The pattern was reminiscent of the cold civil war last fall when three million workers quit

3 Conferees Are Bitter Foes of ERP

10 Pct. Reduction But 12-Month Basis Believed Likely in Aid Bill Compromise

Three last-ditch opponents of the European recovery program were among 16 conferees appointed yesterday to settle Senate-House differences over the foreign aid appropriation bill.

The conferees were named after the House, as expected, had refused to accept the Senate's decision restoring most of the foreign aid funds. The Senate's vote of 60 to 9, shortly before 1 o'clock yesterday morning, had put back an estimated $1,100,000,000 previously slashed by the House, and had wiped out most of the House restrictions in the bill.

The three conferees who voted against authorizing the European recovery program last spring were Senator C. Wayland Brooks (R., Ill.) and Representatives Francis D. Case (R., S. Dak.) and Karl Stefan (R., Nebr.).

The other Senate conferees were Chairman Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) of the Appropriations Committee and Senators Clyde Reed (R., Kans.), Chan Gurney (R., S. Dak.), Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.), Carl Hayden (D., Ariz.), and Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.).

Taber to Fight for Cuts

From the House side the conferees were headed by Chairman John Taber (R., N. Y.) of the Appropriations Committee. Others were Representatives Richard Wigglesworth (R., Mass.), Albert J. Engel (R., Mich.), Frank B. Keefe (R., Wis.), Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.), John H. Kerr (D., N. C.) and George H. Mahon (D., Tex.).

In all cases, as usual, the conferees were chosen from the two Appropriations Committees on a basis of seniority.

Taber made it clear yesterday that he would fight hard to retain the cuts made by the House. He said the House had passed an "honest" appropriation bill, and sharply opposed what he called "arbitrary action" to increase the figures.

10 Per Cent Cut Expected

The Senate group, however, will enter the conference buttressed by two overwhelming rollcall votes, whereas the House declined to go on record in passing its heavily reduced appropriation bill. The Senate conferees are expected to insist on putting the European recovery program back on a 12-month basis instead of stretching the funds over 15 months, as the House had decided.

The gap between the two houses was so wide that a conference agreement was not expected until Friday night. This would leave only one frantic preadjournment Saturday in which the two houses could approve the conference decisions.

The most widespread guess on Capitol Hill was that the European recovery program would come out of the conference with a 10 per cent cut in funds, but on a 12-month basis and without the legislative restrictions which the House bill had sought to impose.

At his press conference yesterday Secretary Marshall said he was much gratified by the Senate's restoration of European recovery funds. He said rapid progress was being made in negotiating bilateral agreements with France, the United Kingdom, Belgium and Sweden on the uses of American aid.

Under the enabling act of Congress, such agreements must be concluded with all 16 participating countries by July 3 if American aid is to continue. The Secretary said the four agreements now being negotiated would serve as patterns for all the others.

GOP Promises Free and Open Convention, No 'Steam Rollers'

By D. Harold Oliver

Philadelphia, June 16 (AP).—Republicans completed arrangements today for a four-day national convention beginning Monday and promised it would be a "free and open" affair with "no blitzkriegs" or "steam rollers."

The twenty-fourth quadrennial conclave of the GOP could easily last longer than called for in the official program, depending on how quickly a presidential candidate can be chosen.

The program calls for day and night sessions the first three days, with nominating speeches Wednesday morning and balloting for a presidential candidate starting that night.

Hoover Speaks Tuesday

But Walter S. Hallanan, arrangements committee chairman, told newsmen he didn't believe the first presidential roll call could be taken until Thursday.

Former President Herbert Hoover, who addressed the 1944 convention at Chicago, will speak at this one Tuesday night following the speech of the permanent chairman, Speaker Joseph W. Martin of Massachusetts.

Tomorrow the first important preliminaries get under way. A temporary resolutions committee, which will write the platform, starts public hearings under the chairmanship of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., of Massachusetts.

Simultaneously, in the nearby ballroom of the Bellevue Stratford Hotel, convention headquarters, the Republican National Committee will sit as a jury on contests for delegate seats brought in four States, the District of Columbia and Alaska.

Georgia Fight Important

The most important from a candidate standpoint is that from Georgia. Two delegations are fighting it out for the 16 seats from that State. One is favorable to Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio. The other is reported preponderantly for Governor Thomas E. Dewey of New York.

The national committee decisions in these contests are appealable to a convention credentials committee next week before the permanent roll of delegates is approved.

Hallanan, West Virginia national committeeman, laid down the "no steam roller" dictum in a speech to the final meeting of the arrangements committee. He also took a crack at the coming Democratic and Henry Wallace third

Marcantonio Says Every Delaying Tactic to Be Used To Stop Passage

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

A runaway House carved holes in the 19-through-25 draft bill last night as leftwing opponents launched a filibuster aimed at killing it entirely.

Last-ditch opponents and lukewarm supporters combined to cut the term of draft service from two years to one—a move proponents argued was "killing the draft by indirection."

The curtailment was voted, 156 to 88, after the House Armed Services Committee leaders were upset on another amendment, wiping out the special draft of doctors.

While both actions are tentative, sponsors of the bill were doubtful last night whether they could muster the votes to reverse them with a full membership on hand today.

Filibuster Planned

And perhaps even more threatening to the draft and the entire preparedness program was a drive to filibuster the bill to death, disclosed by congressional followers of Henry A. Wallace.

Representative Vito Marcantonio, American Labor Party member from New York City, revealed the stall plan as the House finished its second day of consideration of the draft with only 7 of 49 pages read and dozens of amendments still awaiting action.

Thus far the House has:

1. Knocked the special doctors' draft out of the bill on a voice vote. The action is subject to a possible later record ballot.

2. Adopted, 145 to 38, a committee amendment requiring that President Truman actually "pull the trigger" invoking the draft after waiting 75 days to see if world conditions have not improved and enough volunteers have not come in to fill up the ranks.

Draft machinery could be set up meanwhile under the amendment, but no inductions could take place until 15 days after such a presidential proclamation.

3. Cut the draft period and acted on eight other amendments.

Delaying Tactics Planned

Marcantonio told reporters off the floor that every delaying tactic would be used to keep the draft bill from passing by Saturday night—when Congress hopes to adjourn. He said the plan was to delay House passage as long as possible so that a joint Senate-House conference committee could not bring back a final agreed-upon version to the Senate before Saturday.

There, opposition Senators will employ the senatorial privilege of talking indefinitely to block action on the conference report, Marcantonio said.

"The filibuster is on," said the New Yorker, whose views and votes usually follow the Communist Party line. "You can quote me as saying we are doing this to save the American youth."

Marcantonio and his allies had little to do yesterday in carrying on their delaying tactics. After

Security Bill Veto Is Beaten By Congress

Senate Also Votes To Override Truman On Railroad Measure

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Congress yesterday won a second round in its battle of vetoes with the President and was leading on points in the third.

Written into law, over Mr. Truman's "no," was the $975,914,700 Labor-Federal Security bill. The House upset the President, 288 to 113, and the Senate clinched the action, 72 to 17.

The Senate meanwhile voted, 63 to 25, to override the President's veto of the Bulwinkle-Reed bill exempting rate agreements by railroads from the antitrust laws.

Clean Sweep Expected

The antitrust exemption now goes to the House, which is expected to make a clean sweep of Mr. Truman's session's-end veto barrage.

The veto votes came in quick succession as the President's struggle with what he terms "the second worst Congress in history" neared a weekend adjournment finale.

The Senate debated all afternoon the more closely contested Bulwinkle bill, but overrode the rare veto of the money bill in half an hour. The House quickly refused to sustain the President on that one early in the day.

The first veto in the series of three was knocked out by both Houses on Monday. Congress then sealed into law a bill barring some 750,000 semi-independent workers from Federal old-age insurance, but upping benefits for the needy aged, blind and dependent children.

In repassing the Labor-Federal Security appropriations bill, the first money measure vetoed in 14 years, the House registered

Truman Denies He Debunked Florida Sunshine

By The Associated Press

President Truman yesterday denied he debunked Florida's sunshine.

Presidential Secretary Charles G. Ross said en route to Kansas City that Mr. Truman did not call California's sun "the real thing," and "this makes Florida look like 30 cents."

Walter Ames, chairman of the board of the Los Angeles Press Club, quoted Mr. Truman as praising California's sunshine over that of Florida.

In Los Angeles Mayor Bowron, himself a former newspaper reporter, corroborated Ames' version in all respects.

"I hate to be in the position of contradicting the President," Bowron said, "but he was quoted correctly. I think he was talking just to be polite, but he did say our sunshine made Florida look like 30 cents."

Two Lost Planes Land in Corsica; One Still Missing

London, June 16 (AP).—Two Flying Fortresses, presumably part of the three-plane flight which took off Monday night from the Azores and then vanished, landed today on the Island of Corsica.

Corsican officials said they believed the planes were en route to Palestine. They quickly refueled and took off.

Wreckage of the third plane, which radioed that an engine was afire, was believed sighted east of the Azores today by a search plane. No survivors were seen.

Officials at Santa Maria airport in the Azores said the Fortresses which took off were in charge of three Jews and carried 19 Jews. A dispatch from Lisbon, Portugal, also said the planes were manned by Jews and headed for Palestine.

The planes bore "N" markings, denoting they were former United States Army property declared surplus, Santa Maria officials said.

Russians Quit Ruling Body For Berlin

Kommandatura Was Last Four-Power Governing Unit in City

By Marguerite Higgins
Berlin, June 16 (NYHT).—The Soviet delegation tonight staged a mass walkout from the Allied Kommandatura of Berlin—the last functioning four-power agency in Germany—with the Soviet acting commandant angrily saying, "there will be no more meetings."

Afterward, Col. Frank Howley, American Commandant of the city, said "this may mean the end of the Kommandatura, but if any joker thinks the Americans, British and French are going to be dealt out of Berlin, they have another guess coming."

If tonight's walkout is not merely an angry Russian gesture, Howley said, the three western allies will run their own sectors, probably in cooperation.

The Russian comment tonight by Col. Alexei Jalisarov that there "will be no more meetings" was flung angrily over his shoulder as he walked out and was barely caught by an American Russian-speaking interpreter. It was not a formal pronouncement but such oldtimers as Col. Howley believe the walkout "probably means the end."

Tonight's walkout followed a 13-hour meeting. It came after the first session in nearly a year in which the four Allies were able to reach agreement on a fundamental issue—that of boosting the food rations of Berliners in amounts up to 200 calories a day.

Tonight's walking was reminiscent of the situation of March 20 in the Allied Control Council—the supreme government of Germany—when Soviet Marshal Vassily Sokolovsky stalked out with

France Votes Approval of German Pact

Margin Is Small One; Schuman Cabinet Had Staked Life on It

By Walter Kerr
Paris, June 17 (Thursday) (NYHT.).—The French National Assembly approved, 298 to 289, early today the London agreement for western Germany as a point of departure for further negotiation but not as a final solution of the German problem.

This means that the London decisions—already approved by the United States, Britain and the Benelux states—will be carried out, that a constituent assembly for western Germany will be assembled about September 1 and that a government for western Germany will be functioning sometime early next year.

But it also means the French have not abondoned their belief there should be tighter international control of the Ruhr than was envisaged at London. The assembly committed the government to continue its efforts to defend this point of view.

Test for Cabinet

Premier Robert Schuman had told the assembly his cabinet would resign if the London accord were rejected.

At the close of the debate which began last Friday the leading political parties supporting Schuman overcame their violent distaste for the agreement as a result of Foreign Minister George Bidault's promise to work for improvement.

The French accept all points which were agreed to at London but will continue to fight for their views which were not satisfied at London.

It is hard to say whether this interpretation will be acceptable in Washington and London, but it was the only possible one which could have won in the assembly today.

A desire to avoid a government crisis and French unwillingness to appear to be swinging away from American and British foreign policy helped swing the victory.

The vote was taken on a joint resolution by the Socialists, Popular Republicans, some Radical So-

'In Interest of Harmony'

4 D. C. Democrats Bow to ADA As Delegates to Convention

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Four veteran District Democratic leaders last night agreed to step aside in favor of four Americans for Democratic Action candidates for delegates' posts at the Democratic National Convention.

The action was taken at a conference between representatives of the local ADA chapter and the Democratic committee. The conference will meet again today to discuss candidates for positions on the committee.

Melvin D. Hildreth, long-time head of the committee, announced he was withdrawing as a candidate for a committee post and had asked three others to do so, too, "in the interest of harmony." ADA has indorsed six of its members for election to the 22-man committee.

Yesterday's "harmony" act came only after ADA twice went to court on the matter. Last Friday the chapter filed for an injunction that would forbid the local political organization from holding election unless ADA qualifiers were allowed to run. The next day the chapter filed similar action to restrain selection of a delegation unless six ADA candidates were included on the list of 12.

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough, who had issued temporary restraining orders on both petitions, ruled Monday he would hear the matters on Friday. The delay was strongly protested by party attorneys, who argued that court delay might deny seats to local Democrats at the convention in Philadelphia July 12.

Hildreth disclosed he and the following Democratic Party veterans would withdraw as candidates for delegates' posts: Mrs. Almira Bramhall, committee secretary-treasurer and a delegate to the national convention since 1932; Frank Cahill, patent attorney and delegate to the convention for 30 years, and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, a delegate since the early 1900s, according to Hildreth.

In their place, Hildreth said, the four ADA-backed candidates will be listed on the ballot. They are Joseph L. Rauh, jr., attorney and ADA national executive committee chairman; Tilford Dudley, assistant national director of the CIO Political Action Committee; Mrs. Ernest K. Lindley, wife of the columnist, and Gerhard Van Arkel, former National Labor Relations Board general counsel.

Wolcott Offers New Measure

TEW Housing Bill Tabled, 6-2, By Rules Committee of House

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The House Rules Committee yesterday tabled, 6 to 2, the House version of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill while a new measure minus public housing was scheduled to be rushed through with leadership backing.

The new bill, popped into the House hopper yesterday even before the Rules group action, by Chairman Jesse P. Wolcott (R., Mich.) of the House Banking and Currency Committee, was expected to be sent to the Senate as a House bill.

The Senate, Wolcott said, might ask for a conference between the new measure and the Senate-passed TEW bill.

But Senate spokesmen last night gave very little hope that the Senate would act on any new measures the House sent over and request any conference.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), author and principal sponsor of the T-E-W bill, said there was no agreement between Senate and House leadership on a housing bill.

"I still think they ought to pass our bill," Taft said, "and I haven't taken any other position up to the present time."

Senator Ralph Flanders (R., Vt.) of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, whose amendments were included in the T-E-W bill, said it was his best personal guess the Senate would not ask

Pay Raise Bills Still Pending; Only 3 Days Left for Action

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

The Federal pay raise bills are still in midair with only three congressional work days remaining before adjournment. Anything can happen to them.

It's possible that either the House or the Senate, or both, will act today on the pressing problem. Tentatively, the House is scheduled to act on the bill to raise salaries of the 475,000 postal employes by a flat $450 each.

However, Speaker Martin and Majority Leader Halleck are still opposed to the bill to raise salaries of the 825,000 classified workers by $360 each.

Senator Taft, the GOP leader, has been waiting for the House to act first on the pay issue. He repeated his promise yesterday that if the House passes a postal bill he will lead a fight to amend it in the Senate to include raises for classified workers. Senator Wherry (R., Nebr.), acting majority leader, also promised action on the pay bills.

One high-placed report yesterday was that House GOP leaders planned to delay action on the postal bill until late Friday or early Saturday. If that happens, it's doubtful if enough time will remain before adjournment to iron out differences between the House and Senate bills and no one will get pay raises.

Meanwhile, nine Democratic members of the House Civil Service Committee issued a stinging

Mike Straus, Unrepentant New Dealer, Used to Split Infinitives to Irk Ickes

With some accuracy, one might say that Michael W. Straus is the last unrepentant apple on the early New Deal tree.

This appellation would disturb "Mike" Straus not at all. Nor, apparently, does the Damocletian sword which Congress now dangles over his graying locks.

The Washington Post
MICHAEL W. STRAUS
Job at stake

This latter calm may spring from Straus' years in the Interior Department as an information officer.

Harold L. Ickes yesterday remembered him as a "fatherly" man, who used to come in prior to press conferences when Ickes was Secretary of the Interior, and advise him how to "conduct my conference and protect myself."

Ickes, who has known the Straus family for years and attended the wedding in 1924 of Mike Straus to Nancy Porter, recalled also the good-humored jocularity of the man. Ickes' grammarian instincts as to split infinitives have long been well known. And Straus, as his information officer, would take peculiar delight in sending in a release for Ickes' O. K. with every possible infinitive or verb form hopelessly split.

Now on his own hook as reclamation commissioner, Mike Straus wants to roll out the West Coast reclamation program as far as possible by January 31, 1949, if Congress axes him out of a job by approving a rider on the Interior Department appropriations bill requiring five years' engineering experience of the reclamation commissioner, his assistant and all regional reclamation directors.

Born 51 years ago in Chicago, Straus attended the University of Wisconsin, took a fling at chemical engineering, served a tour in the U. S. Navy during World War I, then turned to reporting.

He was successively city editor and managing editor of the Chicago Evening Post, covered national affairs for the New York Evening Post, then the Philadelphia Curtis papers.

As a correspondent, he rode Roosevelt's campaign train into Washington in 1932, covered the end of the Hoover Administration and the advent of the Roosevelt era. In 1933 he was appointed assistant to Ickes, who then was administrator of the Federal Public Works Agency program as well as Interior Secretary.

Later, he was named assistant to Ickes in his Cabinet post, serving in an informational capacity.

In 1941-42, Straus went over to the War Production Board, where he set up between 6000 and 7000 "production drive" committees—later known as labor-management committees.

In 1943 he returned to Interior after Roosevelt appointed him Assistant Secretary. Late in 1945, he resigned this post to accept Truman's appointment as Commissioner of Reclamation.

Possessed of a calm, rather dry wit, Straus is by pleasure a sailor. He towers above most men at 6 feet 3, with a frame he describes as "much too heavy."

Distinguished as the lucky guy who occupied Government-owned Linnean House, only private residence in Rock Creek Park, Straus is married and has three children, Margaret, now attending Sarah Lawrance College; Michael, studying at Cambridge School, Weston, Mass., and James, a student at Woodrow Wilson High School.

New XS-I Goal Is 1700 MPH

By the United Press

The Air Forces disclosed yesterday that Capt. Charles E. Yeager, the 25-year-old test pilot who first cracked the supersonic speed barrier, will try to fly the XS-1 rocket plane up to 1700 miles an hour—2½ times the speed of sound.

Air Force spokesmen said they still don't know how much faster than sound the XS-1 can travel. But Yeager and probably a few other military fliers intend to find out.

With the help of engine modifications, they hope to fly the needle-nosed experimental rocket ship higher and faster than any humans have ever flown.

Probably at Muroc

The hazardous tests presumably will be made at the Muroc, Calif., experimental center where Yeager made the first supersonic flight in the XS-1 on October 14, 1947.

The fliers may try to hit an altitude of 80,000 feet, almost 16 miles above the earth, where the rarefied air makes the speed of sound practically constant at about 660 miles an hour.

The Air Force declined to say when the 1700-miles-an-hour attempt would be made, although they said tests on the XS-1 are continuing. But it was indicated that necessary modifications in the rocket ship might hold up the record try for a considerable time.

Just how fast the plane has traveled in the flights already made by Yeager and the four other fliers who followed him through the supersonic barrier is a closely-guarded secret. All the Air Force would say was that the ship went "much faster" than sound "many times."

Constant Above 30,000

The speed of sound varies from about 760 miles an hour at sea level to 660 miles an hour at about 30,000 feet, and it remains constant above that altitude.

Yeager, a World War II ace fighter pilot from Myra, W. Va., told reporters Tuesday that he was "scared, naturally," when he made the first supersonic flight last October.

But the smiling, good-looking flier said he thought the experience was "pretty nice."

"It didn't hurt me," he said with a broad grin. "You can look at me and see I'm normal."

U. S. 'Seeking' Atomic Veto, Gromyko Says

By Peter Kihss

Lake Success, N. Y., June 16 (NYHT).—The current American move to ask Security Council approval of a plan for internationalizing atomic energy is "apparently dictated only by a hunt for Soviet vetoes," Andrei A. Gromyko, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister, charged here today.

The stage was thus set for Russian veto No. 26, probably Thursday, when the Security Council returns to debating the third report of the suspended United Nations Atomic Energy Commission.

Gromyko announced "the resolution must be rejected unless the delegate of the United States withdraws it."

France, China and Belgium added their approval to earlier British and Canadian statements in favor of the American proposal which would indorse the majority plan for atomic controls, and refer the whole issue to the General Assembly in Paris.

Gromyko said statements by such American leaders as former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes, United States Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) and American atomic delegates "leave no doubt that the leading circles of the United States have placed their stake upon . . . the kindling of a war psychosis, which already has affected many, particularly in the United States . . ."

Lie to Take Action On U. N. Police Force

Lake Success, June 16 (AP). — Secretary General Trygve Lie said today he is going ahead with his own plan for a United Nations police force.

Last week he said he was considering a scheme to set up a small U N. security body without waiting for the Big Five military staff committee to break its two-year deadlock.

Greek Planes Blast Rebels

Athens, June 16 (AP).—Twenty Greek planes blasted guerilla fortifications in the Grammos Mountains near the Albanian border. The raids were designed to soften up rebel positions there in preparation for an offensive by Greek ground forces.

Apparently the stepped-up air action meant the Greek army was about to launch its largest offensive in the two-year war. The Grammos Mountains are a major center of guerilla strength.

The rebel radio conceded that Greek planes inflicted heavy damage on the town of Lykorrakhi.

Italian Ban On Reds Hinted

Rome, June 16 (NYHT).—Prime Minister Alcide de Gasperi's government won a vote of confidence tonight in the House of Deputies after a speech in which he hinted the huge Italian Communist Party may be outlawed.

The vote was 346 to 167.

The Senate will take a similar stand of confidence and permit De Gasperi to proceed with his program of moderate social reforms.

De Gasperi said evidence indicates that armed Communists in the Cremona region had orders to overcome the armed forces of the Italian state at the time of the Italian elections last April. He said they had three huge weapons deposits with enough guns to overwhelm the forces of the state. Presumably the Communists received a last-minute countermand. Then De Gasperi declared:

"We'll see how the Communist Party behaves itself from now on."

convening at 10 a. m., House GOP leaders ran in other business ahead of the draft and the selective service bill was not taken up until after 3 p. m.

Marcantonio then delayed things another 40 minutes by making a point of no quorum present. This required a call of the House.

After this a series of other amendments and a flood of debate from supporters and opponents kept the pace down to a crawl.

First an amendment was offered by Representative Mike Mansfield (D., Mont.) to delay the effective date of the draft until a 100 per cent execessive profits tax is passed. It was ruled out on a point of order.

Then Representative Paul W. Shafer (R., Mich.) submitted a lengthy proposal to delay any inductions under the bill until next January 31, when a new Congress is sitting, and perhaps a new President.

Shafer May Try Again

Meanwhile, under the amendment, enlisted pay would be boosted 10 per cent, two-year enlistments would be authorized and Army mental standards for entrance lowered. A congressional "watchdog committee' would monitor Army recruiting efforts during the period. If enough volunteers still were not forthcoming to fill the ranks, only then would Congress start draft calls.

It, too, was knocked out on ruling from the chair that it was not germane to the particular section of the bill. Shafer may offer it later, however.

Sponsors Offer Plan

Sponsors of the bill took some of the steam out of the Shafer amendment, however, by bringing up their own move to require the President to "pull the trigger on the bill."

It was backed by Majority Leader Charles Halleck (R., Ind.), and adopted 145 to 38, despite cries from both Republicans and Democrats that it was "sugarcoating" and "political cowardice."

Next an amendment to delay any drafting of medical men for three months to see if enough volunteers come forward was written into the bill. Then Representative George P. Miller (D., Conn.) moved to strike out the entire doctors draft. It was approved by a voice vote.

Compromise Hinted

The major blow to the bill came when Representative Frederic R. Coudert, jr. (R., N. Y.) proposed cutting the draft term to 12 months A substitute to compromise on 18 months was shouted down.

Coudert hinted he was aming at an eventual compromise of 18 months between the Senate two-year period and the one year voted by the House.

Many of the supporters of the bill—knowing the bill would not be passed last night—had gone home by then, while opponents were sticking close by. When Chairman Walter G. Andrews (R., N. Y.) of the House Armed Services Committee saw he was going to lose, he tried vainly to get the House to quit until today.

Pleas that the 12-month period would do little more than train the men and produce only a few months of service were ignored as the House approved the cut.

Leaders expect to regain control of the situation this morning, but still face a host of other amendments and the filibuster tactics of Marcantonio and his colleagues. Representative Adam Powell (D., N. Y.) still has some 25 to 30 civil rights amendments to offer, all of which will take some time.

Sponsors of the draft are hopeful they can reach a final vote in the House by tonight, but are not optimistic over either congressional enactment of the bill or adjournment by Saturday evening.

New Strikes Grip France

their jobs for "better living conditions."

In Marseille, another Communist hot bed, 1200 metal workers voted to strike in sympathy.

The Berougnan workers struck 10 days ago after demanding wage increases. The company's offer of two francs (less than one cent) per hour increase was rejected. The strikers demanded about six francs (two cents) more an hour.

Labor troubles beset other European countries.

In Belgium, more than 200,000 of the country's 250,000 steel and metal workers struck for higher pay. Antwerp's General Motors, Ford and Chrysler assembly lines and the Bell Telephone factory were idle. Workers were asking a 5 per cent increase. Average wages in the industry are 108 francs ($2.05) to 200 francs ($4.50) a day.

[In London, an unofficial walkout of 12,000 stevedores left thousands of tons of perishable foods lying on the docks, the United Press reported. Seventy-five ships lay idle in the Thames as dockers protested minor disciplinary measures against 11 of their fellows.]

Austria Hikes Calories

Marshall Hopeful On Danube Parley

By Ferdinand Kuhn, jr.
Post Reporter

Secretary Marshall thinks it is a good sign that Russia has agreed to a conference to discuss freedom of navigation on the Danube.

He told his press conference yesterday that the Soviet acceptance was good, to the extent that a refusal would have been a very bad sign. And he expressed his own hope that the conference, tentatively planned for July 30, could reach a satisfactory agreement.

Although a "hope" is far short of an expectation, the Soviet acceptance came as one of several evidences of a change in the Kremlin's tactics. Other signs of a change in recent weeks have been the Russian halving of reparations due from Finland, Romania and Hungary; the relatively easy terms imposed on Finland in the recent Soviet-Finnish treaty; the overtures from Bulgaria for resuming diplomatic relations with Greece, and the hints in propaganda broadcasts that the Greek guerillas might seek a truce.

Policy Seen Unchanged

In Soviet policy, as distinct from tactics, officials here can detect no change at all. Yet the Danube conference is regarded here as a good opportunity for the Russians to show a more cooperative policy, if they have any such desire.

For this reason it will be watched here with much greater interest than would be warranted by the Danube issues alone.

What the United States will seek at the conference—as it has ever since the end of the war—is permission and facilities for ships of all countries to operate anywhere on the great river.

At present the Russians and their satellites have a stranglehold that bars ships of non-Communist states from the 1500-mile stretch from Linz, in Austria, to the river mouth in the Black Sea. Soviet and satellite ships, likewise, cannot operate in the upper reaches of the river which are under western control.

West to Be Outvoted

As the western powers see it, east-west trade in Europe will be greatly increased, and the prospects of European recovery greatly enhanced, if these river restrictions can be abolished by mutual consent.

The western powers, however, will be outvoted by seven to three in the coming conference. By a decision of the Council of Foreign Ministers in 1946, the Danube conference will consist of Russia and six automatically pro-Soviet delegations—those of Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria and the Ukraine. The only western votes will come from the United States, Britain and France.

Austria, a vitally important Danube country, would side with the west but is not yet eligible to cast its vote. The Foreign Ministers' declaration provided a vote for Austria only after the Austrian treaty had been "settled"—and the treaty still hangs fire after three years.

Site Presents Difficulties

The Soviet note, agreeing to the conference this summer, conceded that Austria could attend in a consultative capacity. Further diplomatic discussions with Moscow will be needed to decide whether Austria shall attend as an observer on the sidelines, or whether, as the Americans wish, she can take part in the conference debates on a non-voting basis.

One other difficulty is the site of the conference. The Russians originally suggested Belgrade; the United States formally proposed it. Now the Russians have said that facilities were lacking at Belgrade and that some other capital of a Danube country with voting powers would have to be chosen.

This appeared yesterday to narrow the choice to Prague, Budapest, Sofia or Bucharest, any of which would be acceptable to the United States. In any case, it will be the first major conference in Soviet-dominated territory since the Moscow meeting of the Foreign Ministers in March of last year.

In view of precedents set in arranging the Moscow conference, it can be assumed that the United States insisted upon the admittance of newspapermen and full freedom from censorship for reporting the conference. These were made preconditions of American attendance at Moscow, and presumably at any other conference in eastern Europe.

Russians Quit Berlin Unit

his staff without waiting for adjournment. It hasn't met since.

The ostensible reason for the Soviet exit tonight was displeasure over a suggestion made by the French chairman, Gen. Jean Ganeval, that because of the late hour it might be better to postpone discussion of a Soviet 14-point wage and social welfare proposal. This had been discussed—and disagreed many times.

The British and American representative agreed. The Soviet representative, instead of replying, angrily got up and the entire Russian delegation of some 12 to 15 persons followed him out.

What seemed to be the real cause of anger was the fact that Howley had pled fatigue at 11 o'clock and left his deputy, William Babcock, in charge. Howley, as the French chairman later pointed out, left in accordance with the proper protocol.

Nevertheless the Russian commandant, who is deputy himself, was heard to mutter something about the "rude behavior of Howley" as he was departing. The American interpreter also thought Jelisarov may have added "there will be no next meeting until Howley apologizes."

Supplies for Berlin Halted by Russians

Berlin, June 16 (AP).—British transport officials said tonight the Russians since Saturday have stopped 250 railroad carloads of supplies bound for Berlin from the western zones. Most of the cars carried coal.

Czechs Land in 'Borrowed' Plane

London, June 16 (NYHT).—Twenty-one Czechoslovak refugees arrived here by air today in a Czechoslovak Air Force Dakota (Douglas DC-3), which their pilot said he had "just borrowed."

This latest batch of refugees from Communist-dominated Czechoslovakia was closely guarded by British authorities at Manston airdrome, near Margate, where the plane landed.

There were 17 men, 2 women and 2 boys, 14 and 7 years old.

[The United Press quoted the travelers as saying the Czech people are afraid their country may be incorporated into the Soviet Union at any moment. Such a merger has been advocated at numerous factory meetings held during the last few days, they said.]

cialists and by Former Premier Paul Reynaud as an independent.

Reservations Made

The motion began by declaring the London decisions had not taken full account of French views. It recognized, however, that rejection would indicate difficulties with friendly countries "whose cooperation today is the surest guaranty of peace."

The next paragraph noted that the London recommendations constituted a list of agreed points and that negotiation would take place on disagreed subjects. The resolution then "invited" the government to participate in the implementation of the decisions, with the following reservations:

1. That the government struggle to obtain international ownership of the Ruhr's mines and basic industries.
2. That it work for the expropriation of mines and industries to eliminate their former owners.
3. That it keep trying to get international management of production, as well as international distribution, of coal, coke and steel.
4. That French security and reparations be assured by a long occupation and that there be no end to the occupation without precise guarantees and the continoccupation of "key areas."
5. That all risks of a central, authoritarian Germany (the Soviet view) be eliminated.
6. That the effort be continued to reach four-power agreement in Germany.
7. That the government continue the struggle for the political and economic organization of Europe.

Yugoslavs Seize 5 Americans Off Boat in Gulf of Trieste

Trieste Free Territory, June 16 (AP).—The U. S. Army said tonight five Americans were taken prisoner by Yugoslavs yesterday while aboard a motor boat off Punta Grossa in Istria.

Army public relations officers declined to give further details. It was learned unofficially from military sources, however, that the Army expected the Yugoslavs to return the captives late tonight or early tomorrow.

[The United Press said the Yugoslav vessel which figured in the incident was reported armed. The Americans were reported taken to Capodistria, capital of the Yugoslav zone.]

Civilians, entering Trieste from Istria, said one of the Americans is a civilian and that the others are soldiers of the Engineers' Corps.

The travelers said the Yugoslavs alleged the motor boat entered Yugoslav territorial waters.

Punta Grossa, a few miles south of Trieste, juts out into the Gulf of Trieste, the northernmost reach of the Adriatic Sea.

New York and Nevada Battleships to Be Sunk

Pearl Harbor, June 16 (AP).—The Navy said today the battleships New York and Nevada, survivors of the Bikini atomic bomb tests, will be sunk next month as targets during Pacific fleet tests.

The Navy said explosives will be placed aboard the Nevada and detonated. The Nevada will be finished off with gunfire from the battleship Iowa and the cruisers Astoria, Pasadena and Springfield.

Israeli White Paper Charges Britain Aims To Kill New State by Stopping Oil Supply

Tel Aviv, June 16 (NYHT).—Israel accused Britain tonight of closing the great oil refineries at Haifa primarily to destroy the new state through fuel starvation.

The first Israel White Paper said Britain had diverted oil stores from Haifa to Arab states via Tripoli, Lebanon; had provided the Arab Legion with free gasoline and had closed the pipeline from Iraq to Haifi at Arab insistence.

A Foreign Ministry official declared significantly, "the British have no extraterritorial rights in this state."

He said Israel would accept United Nations operation of the plants and even permit the Arabs to receive the same share of oil as they previously got.

Palestine Got 15%

The refineries' normal output is four million tons a year, of which 15 per cent was divided between Arab and Jewish Palestine.

Haifa's refineries, owned by Consolidated Refineries, Ltd., a British corporation, employed Arab laborers and about 200 Jews, mostly as technicians. The Jews said the British had used the disappearance of Arab laborers as its excuse for closing the plants.

The White Paper said refined oil for the Arabs would come from Tripoli, where plant capacity had been expanded by the British.

Arabs Ready To Negotiate

Cairo, June 16 (AP).—The Arab League indicated today it was willing to participate in negotiations for a permanent Palestine settlement on condition the United Nations partition plan is shelved.

Count Folke Bernadotte, the U. N. mediator, said the league promised to send four experts on June 21 to his headquarters on the Island of Rhodes as "consultants"

Bernadotte said he did not know whether Israeli will send a similar group but expected to find out in Tel Aviv tomorrow.

Palestine's fighting fronts remained quiet on this sixth day of the four-week truce.

The Arabs rejected Bernadotte's proposal to declare Jerusalem an open city.

Lambert Quits U. S. Post To Be Nebraska Dean

U. S. Preparing For Evacuation

Cairo, Egypt, June 16 (U.P.).—The American Consulate General in Jerusalem is advising American citizens who want to return home to register at once, a Jerusalem dispatch said today.

The consulate said there would be no forced evacuation of the Holy City but that safe passage was being arranged for those who wish to leave.

The fact the statement was issued, however, was taken as implied warning American authorities in Jerusalem expect a renewal of fighting at the end of the truce July 9, if not before.

Hungary Votes End of Church School Control

Budapest, Hungary, June 16 (U.P.).—Parliament nationalized all of Hungary's church schools today over the bitter protests of the Catholic Church which controlled more than 50 per cent of the Nation's schools.

The vote was 230 to 63 at a stormy session.

Joseph Cardinal Mindzenty threatened to excommunicate any Catholic who supports the action. Approximately 68 per cent of Hungary's citizens are Catholics and many have announced they will not send their children to nationalized schools.

Threatened Catholic demonstrations failed to materialize and the city was calm.

The state is subsidizing the Catholic churches, with eight million dollars of which six million dollars is going to the schools.

The crux of the church-state battle today was the question of who should supply textbooks to the schools.

Czechs Reach Uneasy Truce With Catholics

Prague, Czechoslovakia, June 16 (U.P.).—The Roman Catholic Church and the Communist government in Czechoslovakia have reached an uneasy truce.

The government-controlled press published carefully-censored accounts of church dignitaries congratulating Communist Klement Gottwald on his election as presigrades in church-operated schools. indicate that the thorny church school question is near settlement on terms acceptable to the bishops.

A school agreement was reached last week.

An official communique indicated the government accepted a demand for church control of all grades in church-operaoted schools.

Church sources said the number of church schools had not yet been agreed on and added that Catholic authorities would be skeptical of the government's promises until they were transformed into law.

Meanwhile, registration for the fall semester at church schools was permitted by special government order.

In return, the government requested "religious participation" in the Gottwald inauguration.

Dutch Reject Accord Plan

Batavia, Java, June 16 (AP).—The Dutch government today rejected an American-Australian compromise proposal for a political settlement with the Indonesian Republic. The Dutch then suspended negotations.

The Dutch said a press leak concerning details of the proposed compromise was to be blamed for the suspension of negotiations.

A communique from the Hague, Netherlands capital, said the American and Australian members of the United Nations Good Offices Commission by taking the initiative in proposing a solution had hampered rather than furthered a settlement.

Malay Reds Charged With Terror Reign

Singapore, June 16 (AP).—Authorities ordered the immediate evacuation today of all European women and children from the Sungei Seiput district of the Malay Federation, where Communists are charged with conducting a terror reign.

High Commissioner Sir Edward Gent placed that region and three other rich rubber producing areas of the peninsula under a state of emergency, because of what he called a "serious state of lawlessness."

His action came shortly after Chinese gunmen killed three British planters at Sungei Seiput, 20 miles from Ipoh. Two prominent Chinese also were slain in Malaya, bringing the Wednesday toll to five.

Gent's decree provides the death penalty for unauthorized possession of firearms, ammunition or explosives.

Turn Congress Out, Truman Demands

Independence, Mo., June 16 (AP).—President Truman called upon the voters to overthrow Congress because its "majority is against the people" as he came home today to a rousing reception from friends and neighbors in Jackson County.

The President settled down for the night in his big, white frame home on Delaware st. after a day of campaigning through Kansas in which he limited his attacks on the Republican-dominated Congress to domestic issues.

Hundreds jammed the Union Station at Kansas City and hundreds more stood outside to cheer as the President's train pulled in at 3:45 p. m. (EST). As he stepped into his car, a band played "Hail to the Chief," and later switched to the familiar "Missouri Waltz."

Some Exemptions

En route here, the President exempted a "great many liberal Congressmen and Senators" from the criticism he has levelled at Congress during a cross-country tour which started from Washington June 3.

And, exempting bi-partisan foreign policy from his campaign, he told a crowd at Newton, Kans.:

"Thank God the foreign policy of the United States has not gotten into this brawl."

At Newton, and at Emporia, he said the bi-partisan foreign policy must be supported because it is "for the whole world," and means "peale in the world" if it is carried out.

The President picked "certain people" in newspaper and radio business as targets in a brief platform appearance at Dodge City, Kans., where he defined the coming November election campaign as one pitting the people against "special privilege."

He said he had crossed the country to "lay before you the facts as they are" but that "it is almost impossible to get definitely the facts before the people."

Press, Radio Slurred

He attributed this to "the simple reason that there are certain people in the newspaper business and certain people in the radio business who have a distorted view of what the people ought to know and ought to think."

Mr. Truman did not identify the "certain people" he had in mind. More than 750,000 words have been filed by reporters covering the President's cross-country tour and its now more than 60 formal and off-the-cuff talks.

Passing up a speech in the home county, the President instead indulged in handshaking with neighbors when he arrived on the spacious lawn of the old home.

His sister, Miss Mary Jane Truman, and his brother, J. Vivian Truman, who met him at Kansas City, were with him as he waved and grinned at several hundred persons swarming the sidewalks around his home.

The President waved at a cousin living across the street. In an upstairs window, his aunt, Mrs. Ella Noland, looked on at the crowded scene.

"Aunt Ella's 99 years old, now," the President told reporters.

Returning Tomorrow

The President will reboard his private car here tomorrow for the trip back to Washington where he is due Friday. His family plans to remain here for several days.

This was his first visit home since his 94-year-old mother, Mrs. Martha E. Truman, died at Grandview last summer.

Sources close to the President said he decided against speeches at Kansas City and St. Louis this trip since he plans to make major talks in both cities during the presidential campaign.

The President, who has repeatedly challenged Congress to remain on the job until it passes housing, price control, Federal aid to education and other legislation, told the folks at Emporia:

"All these domestic issues can be fought out on the basis of their merits. The foreign policy of the United States must be the policy of the whole United States, in order to make it effective."

In order "to get peace now," he continued, "we must keep that foreign policy out of the political scramble which will take place in this presidential year."

In an obvious reference to Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) President Pro Tem of the Senate and chairman of its Foreign Relations Committee and others, the President asserted:

"The leaders of the Senate who pass on treaties which affect foreign relations have been working in complete harmony with the President and the Secretary of State. We are going to continue to do that so far as foreign affairs are concerned."

Dewey Is Only Foe, Taft Says

Senator Robert A. Taft yesterday ruled out as virtually impossible the nomination of anyone but himself or Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York as the Republican presidential candidate at the convention opening in Philadelphia Monday.

As an optimistic candidate, the Ohio Senator said in an interview, he is certain that he will be his party's choice. As an experienced political analyst, however, he saw the nomination going to either himself or Governor Dewey.

There is practically no likelihood, he said, that the convention will be deadlocked. Therefore, he viewed the convention as holding no promise for either former Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota, or Vandenberg of Michigan.

The Ohioan made clear that his conviction was not based on any expectation or prior arrangement of a deal to throw the nomination either to him or Dewey in the event of a developing deadlock. It was based, he said, on careful analysis of the delegates corralled to date by the candidates.

The clincher for either himself or Dewey, Senator Taft explained, is that he is the second choice of Dewey delegates and Governor Dewey is the second choice of his delegates. That, as he saw it, left little hope for any other candidates.

Governors Dewey, Warren in Many Huddles

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Portsmouth, N. H., June 16.—Two developments stand out prominently after three days of high pressure politics at this "nonpolitical" conference at America's State Governors.

1. Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and Gov. Earl Warren both have worked diligently for close relations with many of their brother Governors. The results of their work are still unappraisable.

2. The much advertised revolt of the Southern Democrats shows signs of cracking up.

Since his arrival Sunday, Dewey has been in constant huddles. He spent more than three hours Sunday at a corner table in the big dining room with Warren, and the two were together many other times for extended visits.

He has been extremely friendly with Gov. James H. Duff of Pennsylvania. He had his picture taken with Gov. Dwight H. Green of Illinois, the keynoter at next week's Philadelphia convention, and head of Illinois' potent delegation.

Later, however, he openly clashed with Green at a conference on taxes. Green had stated that he favored a referendum of voters on tax increases or new forms of taxes. Dewey termed such a policy a "denial of the republican, the representative form of government—the American way." It was the duty of elected officials to vote taxes, provide services and conduct the Government, he said. If the people didn't like what they did, they could vote them out of office. "If it's left to the people to vote taxes, they probably never would vote them," he said.

The clash with Green has drawn more attention than any other development at the meeting. Dewey was extremely gracious to proposals of other Governors, with particular attention to Duff, Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll of New Jersey and Warren.

Without question Warren has done himself good—if only in getting better acquainted. Many Governors, particularly from the East, say frankly that they didn't know Warren as they know him now. He has been more sought after than aggressive, and like Dewey, hasn't had a free minute.

It is very plain, too, that most of the Republican Governors are fearful of overconfidence in their party. In private they admit that they think President Truman is making hay on his Western tour in spite of blunders that they like to laugh about openly.

Warren talked to the writer about crowds Truman is attracting in California. But he said he felt that maybe they would prove a boomerang. There's a chance, he said, that the crowds might convince the President he has popular support and give him too much confidence for his own good. Warren, very generously, said he thought Mr. Truman was doing the best he could "considering his own limitations and those of his advisers and of his party."

The Southern Democratic Governors don't seem to be together on any program of revolt against Truman. Privately, two told the writer that there had been too much talk about a split in the party—that it was jeopardizing the party organizations. They appear to have forgotten all the plans to draft Eisenhower, although it is a dream that still intrigues. Virginia's Gov. William M. Tuck still talks about Senator Harry Flood Byrd as a candidate. South Carolina's Governor J. Strom Thurmond suggested that the Southerners might unite on Mississippi's Governor Fielding L. Wright.

Gov. Luther W. Youngdahl of Minnesota has been beating the drums for Stassen—he appeared on the local radio last night. Governor Herbert of Ohio today spoke for Taft. The marked absence of support for other candidates for the Republican nomination was emphasized when a New York newsman staggered through the lobby last night shouting: "I'm looking for a Martin or a MacArthur man."

As usual, there have been polls and polls. As a rule they add up to about 325 for Dewey on the first ballot, 250 for Taft, 140 for Stassen. But the figures don't correspond to claims. Driscoll of New Jersey remarked that if claims were to be believed, his State has 105 delegates instead of 35.

The governors called today for "an adquete civilian defense program."

They declared in a resolution adopted at the closing session that "the exigencies of the world today makes such a progarm vitally nesessary."

The conference pledged support of a "properly conceived" civilian defense progarm and said experience during the last war had demonstrated that "efficient operation cannot be achieved unless the Federal Government will work with and through the State governments."

At a round table discussion prior to action on the resolution, the governors agreed the United States must revitalize its civilian defense program now because of the international situation.

Stassen May Lead Vandenberg Draft

By The Associated Press

Reports came out of the Harold E. Stassen camp yesterday that if the Minnesotan fails to win the Republican presidential nomination he might lead a convention move to draft Senator Arthur Vandenberg.

Stassen's friends here contend the last week has shown an upturn in the former Governor's political standing from the low point reached after his defeat by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in the May 21 Oregon primary.

These supporters claim Stassen still has a good chance to get the nomination. Stassen has predicted his own victory on the ninth ballot of the party convention opening Monday in Philadelphia.

That's five more than he said it would take him to win when he was riding to success in the April 13 Nebraska primary.

While he stuck to his prediction of a Stassen victory, a close associate told a reporter that if the drive should fail for any reason, he would expect Stassen to get behind the movement for Vandenberg.

Stassen publicly has praised Vandenberg's stand on foreign policy issues. On the other hand, he has clashed openly with Dewey and Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio.

The enigma of Vandenberg's noncandidacy continued to hold top interest as delegates began heading for Philadelphia from all over the country.

It produced a prediction yesterday by Senator Gurney (R., S. Dak.) that the Michigan Senator would accept the nomination if it were offered.

Gurney's home State will send a delegation expected to support Stassen on the first ballot. But the Senator said he thinks there will be a breakup if Stassen fails to hold early strength.

Senator Young (R., N. Dak.) reported yesterday that Senator Vandenberg had asked him to play down any move by the North Dakota delegation to boom Vandenberg for the nomination.

But at the same time, Young told a reporter he believed Vandenberg "may be a candidate if drafted" by the party's convention.

(A similar view was expressed by Michigan's Gov. Kim Sigler at the Governor's Conference in New Castle, N. H. Sigler said he is convinced Vandenberg is "available," although Vandenberg might not make a move to seek the post.)

Young talked with Vandenberg yesterday. He said he showed Vandenberg a North Dakota news story saying the 11 GOP delegates from that State favor Vandenberg if Stassen is not nominated on an early ballot.

Aside from the first ballot on which they are pledged to Stassen, Young said the North Dakota delegates are reported split as follows: 4 for Vandenberg, 3 for Dewey, 1 for either Vandenberg or Dewey, 1 for Senator Taft, 1 for Senator Baldwin (R., Conn.), and 1 uncommitted.

"Van was greatly interested in this," Young said. "Then he told me, 'Keep me down in fifth place or lower. I don't want to be up at the top.'"

Vandenberg declined all comment.

Martin Lauds Congress' Role

President Truman is attacking Congress because he is provoked that it no longer is a "rubber stamp" assembly, the Speaker of the House charged last night.

Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr. (R., Mass.), a dark horse candidate for the presidential nomination of his party at its convention opening Monday in Philadelphia, in a Nation-wide radio speech, said:

"Mr. Truman is apparently provoked because this Congress refused to blindly follow his dictates, to 'rubber stamp' his wild and reckless schemes for spending and his left-wing plans for Government control of everything in America.

"If the American people had wanted a Congress of 'yes men' for this Administration, they would have elected one . . . In less than two years since the Republicans were elected to majority control of the House and Senate, Congress has abruptly reversed America's 14-year drift toward State socialism and eventual national bankruptcy."

Speaker Martin's defense of Congress and attack on President Truman closely followed one yesterday afternoon by Senator Robert Taft (R., Ohio), an avowed presidential candidate, who rejected the President's suggestion that Congress remain in session and charged Mr. Truman with fighting for "arbitrary power and unlimited ability to spend money."

votes at the convention, but how many delegates will be sent has not yet been decided, Hildreth indicated. Plans for Monday's scheduled primary called for a 12-man delegation with a half-vote for each member.

ADA has declared in favor of an open party convention and has indicated antagonism to the renomination of President Truman, while the Democratic committee has indorsed his reelection. The ADA leaders have indicated sympathy toward Gen. Dwight Eisenhower or Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas.

Davidson, C & P Aide, Gets Award For Long Service

Robert H. Davidson, commercial supervisor of press relations for the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., was presented with a diamond emblem yesterday in recognition of 35 years' service with the company.

Davidson

A native of Tecumseh, Nebr., he started in the plant department of the telephone company in 1913.

Davidson, who is active in Washington music circles, formed the C & P Men's Glee Club which he has directed for the past 21 years. He also organized the Girl's Glee Club there, and the National Press Club chorus, being its first director.

Sen. Vandenberg's Supporters Say He's Still in Race

By Bert Andrews

Philadelphia, June 16 (NYHT.).—Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg is still very much in the race for the Republican nomination for President despite "dope stories" that have pictured him as taking himself out of the contest.

This was the word that was spread in the national convention city this evening by supporters of the man from Michigan.

They talked as if they had talked with "headquarters" and as if they had new assurances that the Senator's stand has not changed one iota from the following:

He will not actively campaign for the nomination.

He is resigned to any adverse effect on his political career that may result from his fight for the European recovery program.

He has not and will not issue any forthright renunciation statement, any won't-run, won't-serve proclamation.

He will not try to stop the Michigan delegation—and any other delegations that see eye-to-eye with Michigan—from voting for him even though he is not placed in formal nomination.

And, if there is an honest and genuine draft, a real demand on the part of the party for him, he will not decline the nomination.

GOP Set for Convention

party conventions, meeting here next month.

There are two "certainties" about the GOP convention, Hallanan said. He explained that one is that the convention nominee will be the next President, the other, he continued, is that it will be a "free and open" convention.

"There will be no 'blitzkrieg' or 'steam rollers' in this convention," he declared.

Brown Airs Views

Representative Clarence J. Brown of Ohio, Senator Taft's manager, told a reporter today that the candidate situation "has not jelled," but that the Taft and Dewey prospects on the first ballot appear about even.

"We can throw in up to 312 votes on the first ballot, but whether we will or not is a matter of strategy, Brown said.

Brown called a press conference late in the day to deny published reports that Senator Vandenberg of Michigan had indicated friendliness in the candidate race.

Brown said he talked with "one of my friends, a very reliable source," today, who told him the reports were incorrect. He said Vandenberg also would deny them if asked about the reports.

"Compliments" Both

"This friend told me," Brown said, "that Vandenberg had taken no position for any candidate." Brown also quoted his friend as saying Vandenberg had paid compliments to both Dewey and Taft and had "resented stories that Taft is not a vote getter."

Ted R. Gamble, manager for Harold E. Stassen, said there are so many "favorite sons" this time, with many of them warranting a little better classification that it is presenting "a great problem."

William Riechel, former California national committeeman, termed Gov. Earl Warren as a "very serious" candidate outside the favorite son class.

Riechel predicted the California Governor will gain votes with each ballot.

He put Warren forward as a "harmony candidate."

Herbert Brownell, jr., one of three Dewey managers, told a news conference "we are very much encouraged, ever since yesterday. Pro-Dewey sentiment is on the increase."

He said no decision has been made on who will place Dewey's name in nomination.

Stassen Due Today

Stassen is expected here tomorrow morning with his wife and two children. Taft is looked for Sunday, as well as Dewey, Warren and Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan.

Meanwhile, a women's feud within the Michigan delegation developed fears among Vandenberg supporters of possible alienation of Vandenberg strength in other State delegations.

Mrs. Dudley C. Hay of Detroit, Michigan national committeewoman and secretary of the National Committee, said Mrs. Rae C. Hooker of Mount Pleasant, Mich., State vice chairman, has announced as a candidate for her place on the National Committee.

The State delegation will elect a committeewoman here Sunday.

Mrs. Hay said she backed Mrs. Hooker's election as State vice chairman in 1945 and again in 1947 and supposed that latter would support her (Mrs. Hay's) reelection to the National Committee this year.

She said she has asked Arthur Vandenberg, jr., to come here to try to settle the row before the delegation meets.

Congress Overrides Veto of Funds Measure; Senate Gives Bulwinkle Bill Two-Thirds Vote

20 more than the two thirds required to override, while the Senate had 12 more votes than needed.

Mr. Truman protested a rider transferring the Employment Service from the Labor Department to the Federal Security Agency and termed it "unsound" to tie riders to money measures.

Senators William F. Knowland (R., Calif.), Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.), Raymond E. Baldwin (R., Conn.), and others, who had opposed the transfer and projected cuts in the Women's Bureau, refused to go along with the veto.

Knowland told the Senate salaries and benefits to millions of people were involved. To upset the bill within three days of the end of Congress would mean only that Congress would write a new bill on the same lines, with the risk of even deeper cuts.

Twenty-four Senate Democrats joined 48 Republicans to override on the money measure. Only 15 Democrats and two Republicans (Morse of Oregon and Langer of South Dakota) voted with the President.

Sixteen Democrats crossed over to vote with 47 Republicans to override on the Bulwinkle bill exempting freight rate-fixing agreements from the antitrust laws, but some usually stanch Administration supporters were among them.

Voting with the President on the freight rate-fixing test were 22 Democrats and three Republicans (Aiken of Vermont, Tobey of New Hampshire and Langer).

In vetoing the Bulwinkle-Reed measure last Saturday, Mr. Truman said it permitted "an important segment of the economy to obtain an immunity from the antitrust laws" without adequate safeguards in the public interest.

Western and Southern Democrats led the fight to sustain the President on the railroad rate issue.

Blocking a move for a quick-voting agreement by the Republican leadership, Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) charged the bill would bolster transportation prices and profits and said:

"If Congress overrides the veto it will be going down the road to totalitarian power."

Blow to South Seen

Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.) said the bill would deal a "death blow" to antitrust suits brought against the railroads in the Southern fight to "equalize" sectional freight rates.

Senator Clyde Reed (R., Kans.), Senate author of the measure, replied that chief opposition came from "a bunch of screwballs in the Justice Department's antitrust division."

In overriding on the funds measure, Congress slightly raised its batting average against presidential vetoes. All told, Mr. Truman has vetoed 137 bills since taking office, mostly minor private claim measures. The Labor-Federal Security measure was the fifth bill Congress has passed over a veto. If the House like the Senate overrides on the Bulwinkle bill, the veto knockout score will climb to six.

Truman Has Used Veto on 137 Bills

By The Associated Press

President Truman, a handy man with the veto, has turned down 137 bills since taking office. Most of them have been so-called private relief bills, making payments to individuals for claims against the Government.

White House records show that the Republican Eightieth Congress has passed five laws over the veto. If the House can muster two-thirds majority on the Bulwinkle bill, the total will rise to six.

In its first session, the Eightieth overrode only on the Taft-Hartley Labor Act. In this session, Mr. Truman four times has been overridden—on the income tax cut, Social Security exemption for news vendors, the Aid-to-the-Needy Act and, yesterday, on the Federal Security Appropriations bill.

Conferees Agree On $400 Million For Interior Dept.

House-Senate conferees on the 1949 Interior Department appropriation bill agreed last night on a total of approximately 400 million dollars.

This compared with $375,692,591 as passed by the House and $422,179,098 as passed by the Senate. The compromise still must be accepted by both bodies.

They said the Senate language to require the Commissioner of Reclamation, his assistant and regional directors be engineers after next January 31 was kept in the bill. The restriction is designed to discharge Michael W. Straus, commissioner, and Richard L. Boke, California regional director, if they still are in office at that time.

The committee chairmen said that generally the appropriations for construction had been settled by splitting the difference between the House and Senate bills, where different amounts were voted.

Romulo Finds U.N. Only Hope for World Peace

New York, June 16 (AP).—Despite "loud and exaggerated" criticism, the United Nations remains the world's only hope of preserving peace, Carlos P. Romulo declared today.

Romulo, chief of the Philippines U. N. delegation, addressed a world conference of religion called by the Church Peace Union at Town Hall.

Attending the three-day conference are over 1000 representatives of the world's religions to consider how religious forces in all nations can be mobilized into concerted action to support the United Nations.

Illinois GOP Group Says Goodby to 5 Members

Five Illinois Republican Congressmen who will not return next year were given a farewell luncheon yesterday by other members of the delegation. They are Representatives Clippinger, Dirksen, Johnson and Stratton, and former Representative Evan Howell.

A highlight of the speech-making was Dirksen's statement that his eyes are improving and that "perhaps, God willing, this is only an interlude in public service."

Housing Bill Tabled, 6-2

for a conference on any new House measure since it was futile to hope for agreement.

"The Senate has passed the T-E-W bill," said Flanders, "and made its record. The House has a record of obstruction.

Chairman Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) accused the House Republican leadership of the "greatest misuse and misappropriation of legislative intent and power," and called the Rules Committee action "poor sportsmanship."

"Right to Go to House Floor"

"Certainly all evidence is that the T-E-W bill has a right to go to the House floor and be voted up or down," Tobey said.

As the situation now stands—unless there are some quick shifts on one side or the other—Congress will adjourn without passing any housing bill.

Wolcott's new bill would extend the FHA Title VI insured loan authorization, provide for accelerated depreciation of taxes—10 per cent for five years—to builders of multiple rental housing units, and provide government guarantees of secondary veterans' mortages.

Wolcott said he would call a meeting of his committee at 11 a. m. today to consider the new bill. He had "reasonable assurances" it would now get through, he said. Previously the committee had voted 14 to 13 to add public housing, slum clearance, urban redevelopment, housing research and rural housing aids to the original Wolcott proposition.

Two Switches Thought Possible

His statement was taken to mean that two committee Republicans, Representatives Hardie Scott (R., Pa.) and William G. Stratton (R., Ill.) had switched their support of the TEW bill. Up to a late hour Monday night they had refused to do so.

But in any event, Wolcott may not get his committee meeting today. Democrats, irate at what they called "dictatorial and autocratic" action of the Rules group, said they will block any meeting while the House is in session. Unanimous consent for such meeting is necessary.

The Democrats said that if the Republican Party wants a housing bill the Rules Committee can still take the T-E-W bill from the table.

However, the Rules group, a vehicle through which House Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr., exercises authority over what legislation the House can consider, moved in swiftly last night and made a special ruling. The group suspended rules on introduction of bills for the next three days. This means that at Speaker Martin's discretion a bill can be called up either by an individual or a committee for this period. Bills coming up under such procedure cannot be amended or recommitted.

Wolcott said if all else fails he will seek House Ways and Means Committee approval of a bill designed only to write off depreciation for income taxes for the next five years and send that to the Senate.

Not an Ultimatum to Senate

Wolcott, who has frequently charged Taft with handing ultimatums to the House, said he was not handing an ultimatum to the Senate.

If the Congress fails to pass any housing bill this session Title VI of the Federal Housing Administration law providing for emergency housing construction will be killed. This section is one which builders and real estate men heartily support since the Government insures 90 per cent of the mortgage on a cost, not value, basis.

This section, however, has been inoperative since April 30 when the law lapsed, and already builders have begun to shift over to Title II, which will still be authorized under FHA's organic act. Under this section loans are insured on value, at 80 per cent. Under veterans' legislation veterans can still get 100 per cent insured loans.

Some Stabilizing Effect

FHA spokesmen said that reversion to the Class II loans already has had a stabilizing effect on home building. In the Senate Title VI has always been considered somewhat ifinationary anyway, because the mortgages are so heavily insured on cost of building rather than the actual value of the dwelling.

Under its organic act FHA started with a 10-million-dollar revolving fund which has now grown to 165 million.

From January to April of this year the 104,698 new dwelling units provided under the FHA program were allocated as follows: Under Title II, 10,713 new small homes were built; under Title VI, 59606 new small homes and 34,379 rental projects (608's.) were built.

Flanders said experience with the Class II loans since April has robbed the House of the Club it hoped to use to force the Senate to agree to extend Title VI.

"A hollow victory for the House," commented Flanders.

U. S. Seeks to Halt CIO Alcoa Strike

Ask Restrainer

Operators Sue Lewis On Pensions

By the United Press

While the Government groped for a peace formula to head off a soft coal strike next month, the mine owners yesterday filed another lawsuit against John L. Lewis that threatened to deadlock their dispute more tightly than ever.

Van Horn

Operator Ezra Van Horn asked the Federal District Court here for a restraining order to prevent Lewis from paying pension or other benefit from the 1947 miners' welfare fund until the court decides which miners and dependents are eligible.

The union-management coal contract negotiations collapsed Tuesday over Lewis' insistence that the welfare fund money be released and the operators' equally firm refusal to do so.

Lewis had said there would be no new contract to replace the one expiring June 30 unless the operators first granted that demand. The operators walked out with a pointed suggestion that it might take another Government injunction to prevent a strike after July 5, when a two-week miners' vacation ends.

Federal Mediation Director Cyrus S. Ching intervened at that point. He summoned both sides to a meeting here at 10:30 a. m. today and promised Government mediators would do everything possible to break the stalemate.

Ching declined to say whether he had a definite peace plan up his sleeve. But if his mediation efforts fail, the Government is ready to seek a Federal injunction under the Taft-Hartley Act to keep the mines working.

Van Horn charged in his latest court action that the pension and distress benefit plans Lewis wants to put into operation violate the Taft-Hartley Act. He said that law requires a detailed written formula for payment of the benefits, and he asked that Lewis be compelled to negotiate such a plan with him.

It was the second suit filed by Van Horn to tie up the 1947 fund. He is the industry representative of the fund's three-man board of trustees. Lewis is the union trustee and Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) is the "impartial" trustee.

Last month, Van Horn asked the court to prevent Lewis and Bridges from putting into effect the plan they had agreed on, over his objections, to pay pensions of $100 a month to miners 62 years of age and older, with 20 years' service, who retired after May 28, 1946.

A hearing on that petition bill will be held before Federal District Justice T. Alan Goldsborough June 19.

In his latest suit, Van Horn sought a restraining order against the supplemental plan Lewis and Bridges set up last Friday, again over his minority vote.

That plan would permit the trustees to use the 1947 fund to pay disabilities and death benefits obligated under the 1946 fund. Both funds were financed by industry payments on each ton of coal produced—five cents a ton in 1946 and 10 cents last year.

Maritime Slowdowns Seen on West Coast

San Francisco, June 16 (AP).—Slowdowns and work stoppages by some CIO West Coast Maritime Workers were forecast despite union obedience to court orders forbidding today's scheduled Nationwide strike.

Five West Coast unions last night reset the strike hour for 10:30 a. m., June 24, when a 10-day Federal Court restraining order against it expires. They called on their membership meanwhile to "intensify strike mobilization."

Speakers at a meeting last night emphasized the five-union statement that workers still retain "their right to quit for safety or other legitimate reasons."

Hugh Bryson, head of the CIO Marine Cooks and Stewards, told one meeting shortly afterward, "we are going into a special meeting now to launch a special safety campaign." Many of his audience laughed heartily.

President Signs Bill For Chesapeake Bridge

Kansas City, Mo., June 16 (AP).—President Truman signed 16 bills upon his arrival in Independence today.

They included (S 2201), providing for the building of a Chesapeake Bay Bridge.

S 2593, authorizing the Navy Secretary to convey to Virginia a right-of-way for a public highway at Pungo, Va.

Pittsburgh, June 16 (AP).—The Federal Government today stepped into the wage dispute between the CIO-United Steelworkers and the Aluminum Co. of America.

Charles R. Ward, Federal mediator of Pittsburgh, said that tomorrow he will ask both union and management for an early renewal of wage talks in an effort to avert a strike called for Sunday midnight.

Ward's statement came only a few hours after the steelworkers union officially announced it had called the walkout of 18,330 workers.

The scheduled work stoppage, company officials declared, poses a serious threat to the Nation's production of aluminum. Alcoa produces roughly half the Nation's entire supply.

The strike call resulted from a breakdown in negotiations in which the company had offered an 8 per cent hourly wage increase. A company spokesman said this would average about 10½ cents. Saying the situation "has become a little confused," the spokesman added that the union now is seeking a straight 13-cent-an-hour across the board increase. A union spokesman concurred on the 13-cent figure.

R. C. Turner, Alcoa personnel director, said "the union's demand for a so-called inequity program is misnamed," and added: "It is actually a demand to negotiate a new wage strutcure by adding an average increase of 10 cents per hour to any other wage settlement."

The AFL-Aluminum Union, with 6500 workers in four plants not covered by the CIO, has deferred a strike slated to start Monday until June 28. That union is reconsidering the company's eight per cent wage increase offer which the steelworkers rejected. Average earnings are believed to run about $1 an hour now.

Affected by the CIO strike will be plants at Alcoa, Tenn., with about 8000 workers; New Kensington, Pa., 5500; Edgewater, N. J., 2270; Mobile, Ala., 612; Baden, N. C., 200; Detroit, 550; Richmond, Ind., 200; Bridgeport, Conn., 617; and Bauxite, Ark., 340.

Those workers will be involved in the first major strike called by the steelworkers since the national steel strike of 1946.

GE Production Slowed by Sitdown

Philadelphia, June 16 (AP).—A workers sitdown halted production today in part of the huge General Electric Co. plant here.

Company officials and the CIO-United Electrical Workers said the dispute stemmed from a time study in the punch press section. The company said about 400 employes took part in the sitdown, the union said 650 were idle on one shift and a total of 2000 involved. The plant has 5500 employes.

Teachers' Pay

The praise due Representative George Bates for initiating congressional action toward a pay increase for District teachers must be qualified on account of the niggardliness of the increase which he has suggested and which the House has approved. A raise of $200 for the year—not quite $4 a week—is certainly, as Dr. Regis Boyle put it, "withering so far as morale is concerned." It would do almost nothing to enable teachers to cope with the increased cost of living, to restore the dignity of their profession or to arrest the dangerous drift away from the schools into more remunerative callings.

Among the 20 largest cities in the United States, Washington, according to Superintendent of Schools Hobart Corning, ranks fifteenth on the basis of the average salary paid to teachers in its public school system. The average teacher salary here is $3398—in a city where, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, costs are higher than in any other major city in the country. Washingtonians will never secure adequate schooling for their children by this sort of pauperization of the teachers in their schools.

The District's teachers deserve at the very least a pay increase equal to any that may be granted Federal workers. If the pending Federal pay legislation is enacted, some of the janitors in school buildings may be getting more pay than the classroom teachers. Parsimony could be given no more uneconomic form than to exclude teachers from equal benefits. We hope that Congress will act, before its adjournment, to give teachers a pay increase commensurate with their desperate need and with the vital importance of the duties they perform.

Shipping Raid

The necessity for an adequate American merchant marine has been used in the House as a disguise to cloak what amounts virtually to an outright gift to shipping interests. The two Weichel bills, which the House passed Monday, authorize construction subsidies and tax-relief provisions far in excess of what can be justified by foreign shipping competition. The bills promote this Treasury raid, moreover, by a ruse that represents the Maritime Commission as "favoring the purposes" of the legislation, a contention that is decidedly at variance with the facts. Now strong pressure reportedly is being brought to bear on the Senate by shipping firms to pass the Weichel bills before adjournment.

One of the most intriguing features is that which amends the Merchant Marine Act of 1936 to extend construction subsidies to shipping lines in domestic as well as foreign traffic. The original justification for the subsidy was that it was necessary to equalize the operating costs of American ships competing with cheap-labor foreign companies in international trade. Foreign shipping concerns are excluded by statute, however, from participation in domestic American commerce. Hence the construction subsidy for domestic shipping is totally unwarranted on the ground of foreign competition. Furthermore, the construction differential subsidy for new shipping to be used in both foreign and domestic trade is set for the next three years at a flat 50 per cent of the construction cost, irrespective of Maritime Commission figures showing that the actual differential in construction cost between American and foreign-owned shipping is substantially less than this amount. The bills also provide for a subsidy to meet any differential in health and safety standards between American and foreign-owned shipping, though there is no objective way of determining what such a differential may be. As these subsidy increases stand, they constitute a radical departure from the American policy of equalization of costs that would cause great embarrassment in dealing with other nations.

The same pattern is followed with respect to tax legislation. Operating profits may be set aside to make up past or future losses without being subject to tax. Tax-exempt funds may also be used for the purchase of terminal facilities, although no such exemption was granted firms now operating such facilities. The trade-in age of obsolete vessels is reduced from 17 to 12 years, and the bills fix the trade-in allowance at the current market price rather than at a sum consistent with actual cost and depreciation. There are many more such jokers in the Weichel bills, and it is no credit to the House that such substantial changes in the Merchant Marine Act were voted with so little consideration. Surely the Senate owes it to the interest of a healthy Merchant Marine to lay the Weichel bills aside until the whole shipbuilding program can be examined apart from the efforts to make it a vehicle to guarantee the profits of a favored few.

Appropriation Riders

It was high time for a President of the United States to challenge, through his veto power, the pernicious practice of tacking legislative riders onto appropriation bills. If there was politics in Mr. Truman's message returning the billion-dollar Social Security measure, it was politics of the best sort: it served to dramatize for the country an issue far greater than the issue involved in the provision of funds for an important Federal agency. The action of Congress in overriding the veto roughshod was politics of the worst sort: it was dictated more by a desire for adjournment than by any consideration of the national interest.

One need not even take into account the merits of the legislation which Congress attached to the Social Security appropriation to agree with President Truman that it is not "in the interest of good government that legislation of such importance should be enacted in such a manner." It was enacted, as he said, "entirely without reference to or hearing by the legislative committees concerned with such matters." And what is even more disquieting is the plain fact that it was enacted designedly in such a way as to make extremely difficult, if not actually to nullify, exercise of the President's constitutionally conferred veto power. It took rare courage as well as statesmanship for Mr. Truman to run the hazard of leaving the Social Security Administration without funds.

What Mr. Truman did was, as he called it, "unusual," but it was not unprecedented. In 1879 and 1880, during the Administration of Rutherford B. Hayes, an attempt was made by Congress to impose its will on the President through just this technique of appending legislation to a vital appropriation. President Hayes denounced it as involving "a radical, dangerous and unconstitutional change in the character of our institutions," destroying the constitutional distribution of powers among the coordinate branches of the Government. He had this to say on the subject:

> To say that a majority of either or both of the houses of Congress may insist on the approval of a bill under the penalty of stopping all of the operations of the Government, for want of the necessary supplies, is to deny to the Executive that share of the legislative power which is plainly conferred by the second section of the seventh article of the Constitution. It strikes from the Constitution the qualified negative of the President.

In the controversy of that time, President Hayes persisted in vetoing the obnoxious bills until his opponents on the Hill, who could not manage to muster the votes necessary to override him, were at last compelled to yield and separate the appropriations from the riders. President Truman, unfortunately, has not had such support even from the members of his own party. But it is not impossible that he will win it from the country if Congress continues to behave so irresponsibly. Taking the fight between himself and Congress to the people, he is justified in saying, at least on this particular issue, that he has done, as he put it, his "damnedest." And this is something the people of the United States are prone to respect.

Antilynching Bill

Senator Ferguson's much-amended antilynching bill, now reported out by the Senate Judiciary Committee, is very different from the arbitrary and unconstitutional schemes that have usually been promoted under this heading. Apparently the whole problem has been carefully studied from the point of view of what Congress can reasonably and constitutionally do within the framework of our Federal system. The result is a bill that would doubtless restrain would-be lynchers in some instances but would not make lynching as such a Federal offense. "It seems to be well-settled law," the committee report says, "that any Federal sanctions against the individual lynchers (aiders, abettors, etc.) are invalid."

Private individuals engaged in a lynching would run afoul of this measure only if they should conspire with an officer responsible for protection of the victim. State and local law-enforcement officials would be liable to punishment if they should conspire with a mob to permit a lynching, if they should willfully fail to prevent a lynching or to make all reasonable efforts to protect the intended victim. The reason for this distinction is clear. Under the Fourteenth Amendment no State may "deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law." And Congress may enforce that prohibition by appropriate legislation. In other words, Congress may prevent the States and their officials from participating in or aiding a lynching, even though enforcement of the law against individuals is left to the States.

Other provisions of the bill direct the Attorney General to make an investigation if he is given information on oath that any official has failed to do his duty in connection with a lynching. That would be the Attorney General's duty in any event. The bill also authorizes civil actions in the Federal courts for damages against lynchers and permits judges to order either civil or criminal cases under the bill to be transferred away from the scene of agitation. Another reasonable provision extends the penalties of the Federal kidnaping law to anyone transporting a person across State lines "with intent to lynch or aid in lynching such person."

This newspaper has opposed many predecessors to this antilynching bill because they have seemed to us to be impracticable and to fly into the face of our Federal system. The present bill seems to be free from such objections, but it still arouses bitter emotions in the deep South. The question is whether the relatively mild restraints it would impose would be of any real value in finally stamping out the unspeakable crime of murder by mobs. The Southern States have now virtually wiped out this shameful practice, as the Western States did some decades ago. Should an outbreak of lynchings again occur, Congress will undoubtedly pass the Ferguson bill, or some variation of it. But, after all, enforcement of both Federal and State laws depends largely upon the sentiment and actions of the people in their own communities.

Gertrude Atherton

There is an interesting irony in the fact that the death of Mrs. Gertrude Franklin Atherton at the age of 90 years has been ascribed to causes growing out of "advanced age." The whole of the second half of her life had been a defiance of age. She was in the days of her maturity a brilliant and beautiful woman and was determined to remain so. To this end she had submitted herself to the much publicized "rejuvenation" treatments devised by the Austrian Dr. Steinach, and capitalized the experience by making it the theme of her most celebrated and successful novel, which she called Black Oxen, borrowing the title from a simile by the poet Yeats.

To many it seemed that she had succeeded. By nearly a decade she survived Yeats, who was born nearly a decade after herself. Of the morphological status of Dr. Steinach, five years younger than Mrs. Atherton, we have no information; but until a few months ago she continued to be the greatest living advertisement of his theories and techniques. She adhered to her writing schedule of a thousand words a day. An interviewer to whom she talked on her ninetieth anniversary last October "marveled at her firm, creamy skin, her ash-blonde hair, her bright blue eyes and her keen, probing mind."

Even so, there were many evidences that Gertrude Atherton had lived beyond her time. Her books were appearing with the same regularity, but they were no longer getting much attention, and a faithful coterie of readers was dying off. A new generation of readers had arisen to whom she was scarcely even a name. Even those old enough to remember her work at the height of her fame would be hard put to recall the names of more than two of her threescore books. These would probably be The Conqueror, a glorification of Alexander Hamilton, and, of course, Black Oxen, because of the sensation that attended the publication of it. She was a competent and in many ways a conscientious novelist, putting into her books more effort and research than the product warranted, but they seem to have none of the qualities that make for a literary longevity.

Thus Mrs. Atherton's desire for perpetual youth seems a little egoistic and perverse, even though it was a desire that deep in our hearts is shared by most of us. Yet it is probable that in refusing to grow old she cheated herself of an experience potentially richer than any of those in her crowded and eccentric life.

Tariff Procedure

The worst that can be said for the Senate version of the reciprocal trade bill is that it looks in the opposite direction of our general policy. Undoubtedly the Vandenberg suggestions that the Senate adopted take some of the curse off it. The Tariff Commission is to be given a time limit within which to report to the President its findings on proposals for tariff changes. And the criterion of the Tariff Commission's findings is the effect not upon an individual American producer but upon the entire American industry. No word is said about the American consumer who is subsidizing some of our protected industries long after they have survived their growing pains. Nor is there any consideration of our world policy or our anti-inflation policy as a criterion for the consideration of tariffs. Senator Vandenberg bids us wait till the charter of the International Trade Organization comes up for ratification. This was exactly our point in pleading for a one-year extension sans amendment.

The procedural changes that will come out of Senate-House conference, no matter what is done, will elevate the status of the Tariff Commission. It has been said that in this respect the revision is not of major importance. That is a matter of opinion. The old system which will now be replaced put the Committee on Reciprocity Information, composed of representatives of interested executive departments, in the key position. When an announcement was made of an intention to negotiate an agreement, the CRI held hearings. Another interdepartmental committee, called the trade agreements committee, then considered the evidence and reported it item by item to the President. He approved or modified the recommendations, which were then sent to the State Department to be negotiated with the foreign government concerned. Under the new arrangement the Tariff Commission will hold the hearings, transmit the report to the President, and the State Department would then be allowed to negotiate within a range called "peril points." To be sure, as Senator Vandenberg says, Congress is kept out of tariff negotiations, but this is unnecessary because the negotiators will already have been squeezed in a kind of Procrustean bed. The procedural changes are more serious than the Michigander would have us believe. When the ITO comes up, we hope that the present direction will be reversed. Senator George took Senator Vandenberg's place on this occasion in speaking in the accents of statesmanship.

District Democrats

The Washington Post is to be commended for its vigorous unequivocal editorials denouncing the "Pendergastian" flavor of the Democratic Central Committee's action in barring independent candidates from the ballot in the city's only election.

The reaction of any fairly alert Washingtonian to this sordid mess is probably compounded of equal parts of indignation and amazement. Indignation over the rankest form of machine domination now exposed as being foisted upon this otherwise voteless city by old-line politicians. Amazement over the crudity of the attempt to disqualify candidates and voters alike by such tricks as constantly shifting eligibility requirements.

Finally, stripped of all pretense, the local contest is now clearly seen as a fight for power between the old entrenched Democratic Party organization and the new enterprising Americans for Democratic Action.

Not the least amusing aspect of the old party's twisting and turning in order to keep out ADA members is the fact that Chairman Hildreth of the D. C. Democratic Committee is himself a member of ADA. How in logic can he justify stripping from the ballot names of other ADA members, claiming that a national group is seeking to invade local territory, when he himself is "guilty" of belonging to that same coterie?

A recent broadcast by two of the disqualified candidates, Mr. Tilford Dudley of CIO-PAC and Mr. J. C. Turner of AFL's Operating Engineers Local 77, provides additional fruity details. Mr. Turner said that only a few weeks ago he was apparently entirely eligible, for his name was among those voted upon as candidates for vacancies in the Democratic Central Committee for the term expiring June 14. Now, his membership in ADA is suddenly cited as ground for rejection of his candidacy for the next term.

Thoughtful Washingtonians might indeed ask "how come" on many aspects of this ugly tale of maneuvering. Let's hope the courts, where ADA has now taken the issue in respect to both Washington's representation in the Democratic National Convention and the local Democratic Central Committee, will see fit to grant the city a free and genuine election in which the registered Democratic voters can exercise a real choice. JANET MEREDITH.

District Sales Tax

For the past two years The Washington Post has favored a sales tax for the District of Columbia on the ground that it is either the last resort or that alternative measures of raising revenue are inferior.

A better alternative to both the sales tax or to increases in the real estate tax is available. Many interested citizens' groups have demonstrated, in testimony before the District Commissioners and congressional committees, that the funds required to balance the budget can be raised by the personal income tax.

Economists and tax experts agree that the personal income tax should play a fundamental role in any sound tax structure. It is the fairest way of raising revenue because it is levied on those who are best able to bear it, in proportion to their taxpaying capacity. In the District the role of the personal income tax is exceedingly minor, constituting but 5 per cent of all tax revenue. If the bill before the Senate now were to pass, its yield would be reduced to negligible proportions.

Revenue from the personal income tax can be increased in two ways. First, the base should be broadened to include all District residents regardless of their State of domicile. Second, the rate structure should be made more progressive and the rate should be increased. These changes can easily raise the personal income tax yield by more than 12 million dollars in a full year, the amount expected from the proposed sales tax.

District government officials and members of the District congressional committees are not elected by, and are not responsible to, the people they govern. In the absence of local suffrage, it is the responsibility of a progressive newspaper like The Washington Post to give widespread publicity to all the facts regarding matters as vital as local tax policy. Moreover, The Washington Post should use its influence to promote progressive tax policy in the local sphere, as it has done in the national. In this instance, The Washington Post has not fulfilled its duty to the community.

BENJAMIN C. SIGAL,
President, Washington Chapter, Americans for Democratic Action.
Washington.

[Editor's Note—The Washington Post has consistently recognized the need for a broadened income tax made applicable to all Washington residents. It will continue to do so. In the present emergency, however, a sales tax is the only realistic source of revenue. Washington, with its wealth of visitors and income tax-relieved residents, is an exception, it seems to us, to the general criticism of the sales tax.]

"Joshua Liebman"

In some manner, I missed seeing any news account of the death of Dr. Joshua Loth Liebman. When your editorial of June 12 appeared, we were shocked to know of his passing, and expected the editorial to throw some light on the circumstances, perhaps reviewing his life and work.

It was disturbing to find, instead, what seemed to be a poorly timed and somewhat superficial comment on his Peace of Mind; with strong implication that the book had little real merit and was merely a work of homiletics written in the idiom of modern psychiatry, from which profit was thought derived by readers largely because they were desperately unhappy.

Several reasonably happy people among our friends have found the book to be a real help to knowledge of psychic needs and conflicts and their management—particularly conflicts between perhaps too idealistic moral codes and possibly too harsh concepts of natural realism. Such knowledge is essential in any society, according to the passage quoted by the editorial mentioned.

The editorial statement that the passage quoted suggests material poverty as the basic social disorder is apparently a hastily conceived one. Under the language of the passage, a life of material poverty may include full peace of mind, provided that it does not require relentless effort, or that such effort, if required, does not meet defeat and frustration.

"To err is human," and one poor editorial does not make a poor newspaper, but it certainly does detract from an otherwise very good one with the usually high standards of The Washington Post.

"Overtime On Overtime"

Your June 14 editorial, "Overtime on Overtime," has omitted reference to a most important fact. The administrator of the Wage and Hour Division in November, 1940, issued an Interpretative Bulletin in which he said that extra compensation for "hours worked outside the normal or regular working hours" or for work on Sundays and holidays may be credited against the overtime pay required by the Fair Labor Standards Act. Later the same opinion was expressed regarding extra compensation for work on Saturdays.

In its decision the Supreme Court overruled the administrator's opinion regarding extra compensation for Saturdays, Sundays and holidays and for work outside of normal or regular working hours; however, and this is a point I want to emphasize, employers who relied upon the administrator's opinion are protected by the Portal Act from liability for the past.

With respect to night work in the stevedoring industry, the court ruled that these hours were not "outside the normal or regular working hours" and that the higher rates were simply the regular rates for undesirable hours. A former administrator told the stevedoring industry this same thing as long ago as 1943, and the industry elected to ignore his opinion. My predecessors and I have felt it to be our duty to give employers our best judgment regarding the requirements of the act and to advise them to change practices which did not satisfy the statute. Opinions so expressed usually have been upheld by the courts. In this particular instance the stevedoring industry certainly had ample and timely warning.

Various estimates have been made of the potential liabilities. Most of them are completely fantastic. The Supreme Court commented on these estimates on page 6 of its decision and in footnote 7 pointed out "the basis for such figures does not appear." Even the 43 million dollars mentioned in your editorial as the potential liability of one firm touches the realm of fantasy.

This industry has the good faith defense available as to Saturdays, Sundays and holidays; it possibly may be relieved of the double damages liability by Section 11 of the Portal Act; longshoremen frequently work for more than one employer in a single week without working more than 40 hours for any one of them; suits not already filed will be subject to a two-year period of limitation. When all of these considerations are weighed in the final determination of the suits, I am confident the ultimate recovery will be only a small fraction of the vast amounts which have been mentioned.

I agree completely that legislative action to define the "regular rate" of pay is needed. I have said so to the Congress in my last annual report and have testified to this effect before subcommittees of both the House and Senate within the past few months.

WILLIAM R. McCOMB,
Administrator, Wage and Hour Public Contracts Division, Department of Labor.
Washington.

The Washington Post was aware of these defenses to payment of damages but space did not permit of comment on this question at the time. Moreover, Mr. McComb's statement indicates that in case of the stevedoring industry damage claims may be quite large, for the industry had been told by a former administrator that, in his opinion, higher rates for night work were not outside regular working hours. Consequently the stevedoring industry and any other industry similarly advised having the same type of wage schedules will be deprived of the "good faith" defense as regards night work. And the administrator himself is by no means sure that the stevedoring industry will escape double damage liability under the Portal Act. Meantime, a West Coast longshoremen's union is preparing to file an additional 2000 suits for back pay on the basis of the Supreme Court decision.

Appraising Women A.B.s

By Malvina Lindsay

What Price College

SCARCELY a discussion of higher education can be held these days without a question arising that usually starts verbal fireworks. It is: Why aren't American women being educated for the lives they lead?

State presidents of the American Association of University Women, now in conference here, are continuing exploration of this problem, which was one of the controversial highlights at their biennial convention a year ago in Dallas. At that event a man speaker, Dr. Lynn White, jr., president of Mills College, stirred up an intellectual hornets' nest when he sailed into the curriculums of Eastern women's colleges, declaring they were formulated on the assumption women were "men in disguise." A panel of women vigorously dissented with most of his charges, and the argument continued informally throughout the convention in hotel lobbies, buses, over luncheon and dinner tables.

About the same time, Dr. Ordway Tead, chairman of the New York City Board of Higher Education, made similar criticism of women's education at a Smith College conference on the role of women in contemporary society. Since then business leaders, psychiatrists, anthropologists, preachers, teachers, lecturers and others have added their complaints that women are coming out of college unequipped to support themselves, or to manage families and run homes, or to be effective citizens.

IN REPLY the charge has been made that critics of the women's colleges were Fascists at heart who would relegate women to kuchen, kinder und kirche. Other defenders of the present system ask: Are men being effectively educated for the lives they lead, especially in their homes? Still others inquire: Is anybody being effectively educated?

Advocates of traditional liberal education for women maintain it gives women as human beings a foundation of knowledge, thought and understanding which is essential for self-development, and that special skills can easily be taken on later. Yet some women leaders in education, including several presidents of women's colleges, admit that some overhauling of feminine education is necessary since many women are coming out of college confused by the world they face, unequipped for living in these complex times.

Dr. Constance Warren, president emeritus of Sarah Lawrence College, and author of A New Design for Women's Education, posed the problem again in her talk before the present AAUW conference. She believes the first step in finding out whether women are being effectively educated is to ask the women themselves. She would have a comprehensive study made among college alumnae to determine what they believe they got out of college, and in what respects college failed them. She admits that such a study would probably reveal much of "the bewilderment of women college graduates who find that their education has not adequately prepared them for home and married life, for jobs, or for practical participation in civic and political affairs."

DR. WHITE, in his controversial talk at Dallas, blamed the original feminist movement for promoting the idea that a woman's mind was identical with that of a man, and that in order to prove her equality with men she should be given exactly the same education as they received. But neither he nor most of the advocates of a new design in feminine education would rely merely upon home economics or other forms of vocational training to prepare women for their role in society. They would give women a firm liberal education, holding such is even more essential for them than for men. They would give them much of the same subject matter as men, but with a different approach. They would also put more emphasis on studies related to women's future activities and interests, but would teach these in a basic rather than a technical manner.

This general questioning of women's education has come at a time when there is a widespread back-to-being-women vogue, as marriage and birth rates, fashions and social attitudes attest. There is, of course, danger this can go so far as to shut women off from their full opportunities at development as human beings. Yet it is generally recognized there must be a change from educational attitudes of the past, which, as Dr. White points out, regarded women as either inferior or as identical to men. The problem is to find the third approach, one that, like the Frenchman, will hail the difference between the sexes yet also recognize the equal importance of men's and women's roles.

Passports To Yugoslavia

Please help my poor brain to understand why British young men and women were able last summer to get passports freely to go to Yugoslavia and work on the "Youth Railway," but our State Department not only refused to issue passports to our young people but had a special rubber stamp made, "Not Good for Yugoslavia," and used it on all passports.

I have been informed by a responsible Government official that, when the Yugoslav Ambassador protested to the State Department this discrimination against his country, it was sanctimoniously explained to him that our Government did not wish tourists from the U. S. A. to "take food out of the mouths of Yugoslav women and children"—and three weeks later the State Department, he added, instructed UNRRA to stop shipping food to Yugoslavia on the ground that there was plenty to eat in that country.

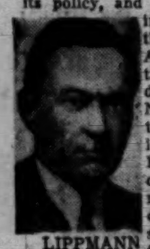
A Theory Of The Peace Offensive

THE SOVIET government usually changes its diplomats when it is preparing to change its policy, and it is, therefore, interesting that the new Soviet Ambassador and the new Soviet delegate at the U. N. are both of them specialists in Asiatic affairs. It may be significant that the arrival of the new diplomats and the so-called peace offensive in Europe should coincide with a marked decline in the fortunes of governments and parties in Asia which are associated with Britain, the United States, and the Western world.



LIPPMANN

THUS, it is becoming ever more improbable that Chiang Kai-shek can unify China. There is no certainty that native nationalism in Indonesia, Indo-China and Burma, perhaps even in India and Pakistan, will not turn increasingly to Moscow, rather than to London and Washington, for guidance and support. And in the Middle East neither in Egypt, Iraq, or Syria are the governing classes, upon whom London has depended, secure against a rising discontent.

On the other hand, the signs are multiplying that the Soviet Union is disposed to recognize that for the time being at least Europe cannot be conquered and cannot be absorbed, and that an accommodation is necessary if the Soviet Union is to retain an important influence in the future of Europe. The Czechoslovak coup evoked a more important reaction—namely American rearmament—than the Kremlin or the Cominform appear to have anticipated. In the cold war for the mastery of Europe the Czechoslovak affair appears to have been the Battle of the Bulge. It has been followed by a policy of appeasement in Finland, Rumania, and Hungary, by a reduction of the pressure against Greece, by a reduction of the demands on Austria, and in Germany by cat-and-mouse tactics designed, it would appear, to avoid a showdown. It may be that there is something in the rumor that at the next meeting of the General Assembly the Russians will offer all of Europe and the United States a nonaggression pact.

THE CRUCIAL question is whether Stalin is testing out a new policy: namely appeasement in Europe while nature, assisted by Moscow, takes its course in what were once the realms of empire of the western world. One can say no more than that this is a very plausible theory.

It is consistent with what is now happening—namely the current peace offensive in Europe combined with what is happening in China and southern Asia.

It is consistent also with the historic pattern of Russian policy which is, when repulsed in Europe, to expand into Asia.

It is consistent also with the Marxian dogma that the victory of communism will follow the collapse of capitalist imperialism. In Asia the capitalist empires are in fact being liquidated, and it may well be that Stalin, who has always had great respect for American capitalism, who has always been very conscious of Asia, has come to think that Asia, rather than America and the west, is the place where the Marxian prophecy will first come true.

IF THIS hypothesis—that is all it is—is correct, the task of western diplomacy on the one hand is to press forward towards an all-European peace and, on the other hand, to work out new ways of preserving "legitimate, beneficial and profitable western interests and influence in Asia.

The right response to Stalin's European peace offensive is, it seems to me, to grasp the nettle firmly by asking him what are the terms on which he will agree to the evacuation of Europe and will permit the whole continent, including all the German states, to work out its own economic and political destiny. If he will not agree to that, if the terms he sets for withdrawal are meant to be unacceptable, then it will be plain to Europe that he is not seeking peace but is conducting psychological warfare.

But Stalin's intentions cannot be tested, as President Truman's advisers seem to think, by dealing with secondary issues. Nothing less than a full disclosure of his intentions towards Europe as a whole will do. And that full disclosure cannot be made in words but only by acts, of which the ultimate and decisive act could only be the retirement of the Red Army from the Elbe 500 miles back to the frontiers of the Soviet Union.

THE WORKING out of a new policy in Asia is a very much more difficult thing. We have to recognize that the liquidation of great empires means the destruction of authority that is not easily replaced, and the release of passions which are not easily disciplined.

We have to recognize too that most of Asia is quite unprepared for the practice of political liberty, or of a free capitalism or free socialism. In the west the authoritarian methods of Russian communism are alien, regressive, and certain to evoke, as they have in every country not dominated by the Red Army, a fierce and successful resistance. But amidst the destitution, illiteracy, despotism, corruption and cruelty to which the masses of Asia are accustomed, it is by no means obvious that Soviet communism is judged as western men judge it. There in the backwardness of Asia, which has never known freedom, communism is a much more formidable antagonist that it is in Europe and the west.

IT MAY BE, therefore, that the maintenance of western influence in Asia will call for a policy of choosing key areas, holding them strongly and developing them intensively and progressively—Japan, the Philippines, Indonesia, Saudi-Arabia, Iraq, and what was Palestine. For it seems exceedingly unlikely that the whole of Asia can be subsidized under a larger Marshall Plan, or supported by intervention under the Truman Doctrine, or shored up through satellite rulers by the British Foreign Office—or that much can be salvaged for the west if it does not concentrate its energies at a few selected points from which its influence and example can be made to radiate.

minority report on the handling of the pay raise problem.

The report accused the House Republican high command of bypassing the Civil Service Committee, and of giving it a "virtual ultimatum" to scale down its bill, which proposed $585 for postal employes and $468 for classified people.

"To put it bluntly," the Democrats wrote, "in bringing these measures before the House, the Civil Service Committee has been used as a mere conduit to carry out a mandate of the policy committee of the majority party.

"Since, under the ultimatum which brought these measures before the House, they must either be rejected or accepted as is, we cannot oppose them without harm to hundreds of thousands of employes whose salaries, reduced by living costs, no longer meet the necessities of daily living."

In private, the Democratic members—and some of the Republicans as well—were bitter over the acts of the "dictatorial" House GOP leaders. As one member commented: "It's now at the point where you can't even believe what you're told on the pay bills."

He was referring, of course, to the open attempt to kill pay raises for the classified employes. Committee Democrats, it was learned, had tried to merge the two bills, but they went along on separate measures for the postal and classified workers when they were "assured" bills would be approved if the pay amounts were reduced to the $450 anad $360 figures.

Incidentally, it's beginning to appear that the strategic move to have two pay bills will turn out to be a major boner.

Another Democratic member had this comment on the tangled pay problem:

"It looks like the Republicans who tried to discipline labor by enacting the Taft-Hartley Act will force classified employes to join a union to get a pay raise they are entitled to. The postal employes are well-organized and the House GOP leaders are willing to give them a raise because they can't stand the pressure from them. But the leaders are willing to overlook the weak and the unorganized.

100,000 EMPLOYES—Top officials of the Army and Air Forces yesterday urged the Senate Appropriations Committee to approve funds which would allow them to hire upwards of 100,000 additional civilians over the number allowed by the House budgets. No more than 2500 of that proposed increase would be in headquarters here.

The committee was told the civilians were needed to replace military people in civilian jobs and to expand arsenals, airfields and depots as proposed in the defense program. The House bill would allow the Army to take on about 27,000 additional civilians, and the Air Forces to add a smaller number.

RETIREMENT: The House yesterday approved the Vursell bill to make retroactive to July 1, 1945, a provision in the Langer-Chavez-Stevenson Retirement Act which allows employes who are laid off after 25 or more years of service to retire on a reduced annuity.

UPWA: This left-wing CIO union has lost another batch of members. Local 593, composed of supervisory personnel in the Michigan Unemployment Compensation Commission, has notified President Abram Flaxer it has voted unanimously to withdraw because:

"We are thoroughly convinced the charges made by responsible persons and publications that the UPW is Communist controlled are true and that we, as loyal American citizens and conscientious Government employes, cannot condone affiliation with your international under these circumstances.

"Further, that your conduct and the conduct of your lieutenants and cohorts at the recent Atlantic City convention revealed to us that your international is no longer a Democratic union and is operated by individuals who appear to have been schooled in all the tricks and conniving of well-trained adherents to the Comintern."

Social Security Bill Shelved in Senate

The Senate Finance Committee agreed yesterday that time is too short to permit Senate consideration of a House-approved bill adding some 3,500,000 persons to the social security rolls.

Chairman Millikin (R., Colo.) was not available for comment, but committee aides said action on the bill was indefinitely postponed.

The bill passed the House, 337 to 2, on Monday. It would extend social security coverage to State and municipal employes if their government approved, to employes of nonprofit organizations, and to certain other groups.

President Truman has urged Congress to broaden coverage to include the self-employed, farm workers and household workers—an estimated 20 million people.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

The Anomaly Of Taft

IN THE frantic final rush of Congress so much patient effort is being swept aside. The furious drive to get away has brushed down hopes and plans and aspirations as though they had been matchsticks before a flood.

Childs

What gives added drama to this heedless cyclone is that the effort and the plans are in no small part those of Senator Robert A. Taft, one of the three most conspicuous contenders for the Republican presidential nomination. Aid to education, housing, health—these programs he has worked for long and hard.

Senator Taft comes as near to being a responsible conservative as our political system produces. Believing that Government must provide a minimum of intervention to insure against slum conditions and to help provide equality of opportunity, Taft is far from being a "public be damned" Tory.

This being the case, and he has demonstrated it over and over again, it is the more difficult to understand the paradox of his position. Here is the acknowledged leader of the Republican majority in the Senate powerless to get his way.

Take aid to education as an example. The bill that passed the Senate under Taft's careful shepherding provides 300 million dollars a year to try to equalize the unbalance of educational opportunity, particularly in favor of the low-income States. It has wide popular backing.

YET THE little band of Republicans who rule the House have bottled it up. And what makes this even harder to understand is the fact that Taft's campaign manager, Representative Clarence Brown of Ohio, is a member of the little band on the Rules Committee that dictates to the House. Brown has already gone to Philadelphia where, from Taft headquarters, he is proclaiming the certainty of his man's nomination.

The closeness of this relationship has raised suspicions of many who otherwise would be inclined to admire the tough fight that Taft has made. So far as the record shows, Brown has never raised his voice for the measures presumably dear to Taft's heart.

It takes little imagination to see how much stronger Taft's position would be today if he had been able to get his party in the House to go along with his program. He would go to Philadelphia with an impressive record of achievement.

An easy alibi for Taft is the presidential ambition of Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts. It is being said on Capitol Hill that Martin helped to block education and health, first, because he wanted to show his independence to Taft and, second, because he wanted to demonstrate his opposition to measures considered "socialistic" by the wealthy backers who would like to put Martin over on the convention.

But that alibi is almost too easy. Important Republicans, including those Governors who believe the party must look forward and not backward, will hardly accept it, nor will the independent voter.

FOR ALL his honesty and his integrity, Taft often behaves with a kind of arbitrariness that has the look of old-fashioned politics. Thus he moved to cut a billion dollars out of the European Recovery authorization when it was before the Senate, over the protests of those who pointed out that the $5,300,000,000 had been carefully screened by at least two able committees.

Such a move naturally pleased Col. Robert R. McCormick of the Chicago Tribune, who is for Taft.

It is on foreign policy that Taft is weakest. In his sympathetic appraisal in Harper's Magazine, Richard H. Rovere made the point that it was hard to imagine Taft supplying the world the kind of warmhearted, resolute leadership so essential in the present struggle between east and west.

On the other hand, the Senator from Ohio knows more about Government than probably any man who has occupied the White House since Woodrow Wilson. And it is possible that his knowledge is more detailed and more practical than that of Wilson, the schoolmaster.

Blunt often to the point of seeming rudeness and indifference, Taft never indulges in the kind of smooth-flowing talk that has won popular support for Harold Stassen. Low in most popularity polls, he allowed his name to be attached to the Taft-Hartley law and his nomination would be likely to bring an all-out drive from every branch of labor.

That could be, even in this Republican year, a decisive factor. Yet in that classic phrase, Taft's party may go farther and do worse if the convention bypasses the Ohioan with the flat, nasal way of speaking unpleasant truths.

Dirigible Study Bill Sent to White House

Congress has passed and sent to the White House a bill directing the Maritime Commission to make a study of dirigibles for trans-ocean commercial flights.

Congressional action on the bill was completed late Tuesday night when the Senate approved a compromise reached by Senate and House conferees. Senator Brewster (R., Me.), one of the conferees, told reporters that an intermediate type of trans-ocean carrier, costing between 10 million dollars and 20 million dollars is contemplated.

Fund Withholds Its Approval Of Colombia Exchange System

By The Associated Press

The World Monetary Fund announced yesterday it has "withheld its approval" of Colombia's revised exchange system because, "in its present form, it contained features in conflict with the policies of the fund."

Though the fund did no more than frown on the Colombian arrangement, informed sources said there would be no chance for Colombia to obtain financial aid from the fund until it amended its regulation to the fund's satisfaction.

The fund said it had taken note of "emphasis laid by Colombia on the temporary nature of the announced regulations."

"Colombia has asked for further consultation with the fund, looking toward finding other ways of meeting her problems which would be acceptable to the fund; and the fund has agreed to such consultation," the statement added.

The Colombian regulations applied additional taxes to imports and offered a premium in Colombian money for dollars turned in by Colombian exporters.

The funds objection was based on the ground that the new regulations constituted in effect, though not directly, a change in the exchange rates for Colombian money from the rates that the fund has approved.

The 46-nation institution previously had differences with France, Italy and Canada over questions involving a similar principle.

Loans to Latin America For Farm Aid Suggested

Santiago, Chile, June 16 (AP).—The United Nations Economic Commission for Latin America heard a suggestion today that the World Bank make loans to Latin American countries to buy farm machinery.

Colombian delegate Luis Echeverry said this was necessary to increase Latin American farm production, raise living standards and increase exports.

Raymond Etchats, representative of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, asked the commission to help the FAO program to confront the world food shortage.

Juan Iriarte of Uruguay suggested that the Economic Commission and FAO set up a joint committee to recommend how Latin American food production might be increased.

Senate Confirms Tasca For Monetary Fund

Henry J. Tasca, Washington, D. C., United States alternative executive director of the International Monetary Fund.

Joseph J. Hancock of Kentucky, United States District Judge for the Panama Canal Zone.

Howard C. Gilmer, United States Attorney for the Western District of Virginia.

150 Idled in Strike Of Area Engineers

A total of about 150 operating engineers will be idle in the Greater Washington area today as the result of a combination strike and lockout.

The dispute, which will hold up the early stages of several area projects, is the result of a breakdown in negotiations between Local 77, Operating Engineers Union, AFL, and the Excavators Association of Washington, Inc., which represents 14 local firms.

Last night the Master Builders Association, which includes 36 of the largest employers here, paid off between 100 and 150 operating engineers and informed them work would not be resumed until a contract was completed.

Announcement of this action was made by Fred J. Rice, counsel for the Excavators Association wage committee, and was confirmed by J. R. Skinker of the Skinker & Garrett Co. Skinker is the head of the Master Builders' wage committee.

About 50 engineers have been on strike on projects being dug by members of the Excavators Association since June 9 after contract renewal negotiations ended unsuccessfully.

Rice said the members of the association had unanimously agreed to maintain a "lockout" until the agreement was signed by the union with both associations.

The Operating Engineers Union includes workers who range from heavy equipment oilers to skilled steam shovel operators. The present wage scale ranges from $1.25 an hour for oilers to $2.25 for the steam shovel men.

Shinker said the Master Builders felt the union was unfair "in singling out one group (the Excavators Association) and trying to crucify it."

The union spokesman, J. C. Turner, business agent for the local, immediately termed the Master Builders' act a lockout designed to break the existing strike.

The union has asked a 25 cents an hour increase in all classifications and talked about obtaining "an earning opportunity" for those members not employed on a weekly basis, Turner said.

The employer groups have offered an increase of 10 cents an hour to October 1 and 15 cents an hour thereafter. No offer was made on a change in pay for non-weekly workers, Skinker said. This offer was refused by the union local.

Representatives of the union and the employer groups will meet with Conciliator James A. Holden today at 2:30 p. m. in the Labor Department to discuss the dispute.

The union said the dispute will delay work on the Dalecarlia water reservoir addition, the University of Maryland aviation research laboratory and the addition to the Pan American Union on Constitution ave.

At present, the 14th st. bridge and the Dupont Circle projects are unaffected, according to the union, but Skinker said an attempt will be made to get firms on the projects, who are not members of the associations, to cooperate in employer actions.

Sergeant Hensley Graduated From Traffic Institute

Motorcycle Sergt. Lee S. Hensley, 1140 17th st. ne., was graduated with 28 other policemen from the Northwestern University Traffic Institute.

Hensley

He will return to his duties as daytime chief of the motorcycle men of the Traffic Division July 1.

"We are not anticipating giving Sergeant Hensley a desk job or other change of assignment, but we do, of course, hope to utilize the training he has received at Northwestern," said Capt. Loraine T. Johnson, head of the Traffic Division.

Hensley won a $650 fellowship in January from the Kemper Foundation for Traffic Safety in a national competition to select officers to take the training.

$5,000,000 Apartment Approved in Prince Georges

Plans for a five-million-dollar apartment project, to be built on Landover rd., near the Prince Georges Golf and Country Club, were approved yesterday by the County Commissioners.

Rezoning the tract to permit apartment construction was voted after plans for the development were outlined by Sherman H. Hollingsworth, agent for a group of businessmen sponsoring the project. Hollingsworth said the plans called for 600 garden-type units and a 10-store shopping center. The project, to be known as Kentland, will be built by the Morrison Construction Co. of Bethesda, he said.

The site of the development is near another tract on Landover rd., which recently was rezoned to permit construction of an 1800-unit apartment development and shopping center. Preliminary work on this project already has started.

In other zoning actions, the commissioners approved five requests for commercial use and two applications for permission to build two-family dwellings. One commercial petition was denied and action on two others was deferred pending further study.

County to Sue Over Unpaid Sewer Rental

Fairfax County will bring suit in Circuit Court against residents who have refused to pay rental fees for use of a Government-owned sewer main.

Commonwealth's Attorney Hugh B. Marsh said he would take the cases to court after Sanitary Engineer James T. Corbalis told the County Board of Supervisors yesterday that 284 delinquents owe back bills totaling $5134. Corbalis added that the figure had been whittled down from 690 in March and that some still on the list will pay.

Marsh said he had heard complaints that the $2 monthly rental fees is an arbitrary one, set in excess of maintenance costs. But lowering the rates, he observed, could be achieved only through Federal courts. In the meantime, the county is obliged to continue its payments to the Government.

The sewer was built in the eastern part of the county during the war in anticipation of wartime housing developments. Negotiations for county purchase are in progress.

The Fairfax board of supervisors also adopted, without opposition, an ordinance which will put the county on Daylight Saving Time June 26.

Red Blood Cells Must Be Kept Up If You Want To Feel Alive
Thousands Now Regaining Old Time Pep, Vigor and Drive By Releasing Vibrant Energy To Every Muscle, Fibre, Cell
Overwork, undue worry, and lack of certain foods often reduces the red-blood strength—and starved, weak, puny blood just hasn't the power to keep up your energy and drive.
Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.
To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.
Also, SSS Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.
Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on SSS Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Crime Spree Laid To Girl, Two Men

A 17-year-old girl with movie ideas and two male companions who allegedly used her as their decoy were charged yesterday with a crime spree which ranged from here to Detroit.

In little more than a month, police said, one or more of the trio racked up a $500 holdup in Detroit, stole two cars, yoked and robbed a United Nations official and broke into and robbed two business places in the Eighth Precinct.

The girl, Vivian Knott of 430 11th st. se., is a Board of Welfare charge. She was charged only with robbery (in connection with the yoking of the U. N. official) and released in custody of her parents.

The companions are Walter M. Kendall, 19, of 106 8th st. ne., and a Federal reformatory graduate, Robert E. Walton, 22, who had been staying at the girl's home.

The men were charged with robbery, auto theft and housebreaking. Both were held for grand jury action when arrainged before Judge Walter J. Casey in Municipal Court yesterday. Walton in $5000 bond and Kendall in $2000 bond.

The trio's escapade, police said, began when the girl's brother, George Knott, jr., got in a jam because of an auto theft.

The brother wrote Walton, who had been one of his buddies in the Federal reformatory at Chillicothe, Ohio, about his troubles. Walton made a fast trip to Washington and moved into the Knott home.

The way police tell it, the night of June 9 Kendall and Walton broke into Austin's filling station, 4866 Massachusetts ave. nw., and picked up flashlights, a radio and the proprietor's checkbook.

They moved on, police recount, to the Palace Laundry, 4859 Massachusetts ave. nw., and stripped it of $1500 worth of garments.

Five nights later (still police version) Vivian and her two chums rented a car and did a job on George St. Pol, 41, of 3511 Rodman st. nw., official of the United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization.

St. Pol saw a girl, alone, apparently having trouble with her car. He offered his assistance and at her request drove into Rock Creek Park. Men appeared and soon St. Pol was without his cash, car keys and identification papers.

St. Pol, a Frenchman, received a telephone call after the robbery. His caller identified himself as "Sergeant Drennan" at police headquarters and said he would have to inspect St. Pol's car as part of the investigation.

The caller, Walton, according to police, was told by St. Pol where the car was parked and then went there and stole the machine, using the keys taken from St. Pol in the robbery.

Walton has admitted, police said, that he then drove St. Pol's car to Detroit, abandoned it there, held up a Detroit parking lot for $500 and stole a car in Detroit for the return trip to Washington.

Upon Walton's return, police said, the trio went to North Beach, Md., in the car Walton had picked up in Detroit. Everything was fine—until somebody stole Walton's stolen car.

Indignant, Walton reported the car theft to Maryland State Police at Waldorf, Md., who passed the report along to Washington police. When local and Detroit police started comparing notes it was found that the car had been stolen originally in Detroit.

Walton had given his correct address in reporting the theft, so the rest was easy.

The arrests were made by Detective Sergt. George Cooper of the robbery squad and Detectives R. W. Creel and G. T. McCarthy, both of the general assignment squad.

Cooper said some of the garments stolen from the Palace Laundry and a homemade blackjack, a rubber hose filled with lead, were found in the Knott home.

All in all, brother George wasn't helped much. He's now doing one to three years for auto theft.

Four Indicted In Lobby Case would disclose the respective personal financial interest of all the defendants, and would diminish the weight of their testimony before congressional committees.

Harriss declared in a statement in New York last night:

"With respect to the charges which I understand have been made against me and others for lobbying:

"These charges are totally false, completely unjustified and politically inspired. I am glad to have been in this fight to try and save American agriculture from the destruction and American farmer from the peonage which would have resulted from the communistic program of regimentation, subsidies and bureaucratic price-fixing and controls.

"I will continue my opposition to such anti-American programs and welcome a full investigation and hearing on these absurd and ridiculous charges."

Moore said he was "surprised" but "not disturbed" by the indictment.

"The charges are absolutely false," he told reporters. "We haven't been lobbying. I have not engaged in any lobbying activity for two or three years. I have been principally engaged in market speculation.

"I believe in America and I believe we'll get a fair trial and beat this thing. It is all politics and a misunderstanding. Clinton Anderson is back of it."

Anderson resigned recently as Secretary of Agriculture and won the Democratic nomination for Senator from New Mexico.

As Secretary of Agriculture, Anderson had general charge of the Commodity Exchange Authority. That division of Government recently charged that Moore violated the Commodity Exchange Act by trying to manipulate the price of lard last fall. Moore's hearing still is pending.

He said readers of the State-owned market bulletin, published by him, "are familiar with the fight I have been making against the great international combines and especially the British-Dutch combination of Unilever and their American subsidiary, Lever Bros.

"It was to be expected that they would try to get even with me some way. They are especially anxious to silence me since this is an election year and they know if I can go to the United States Senate there will be a housecleaning in Washington among such international monopolists as these."

Linder said he was considering a Senate campaign, presumably for the seat now held by Senator Richard Russell (D., Ga.).

At Dallas, McDonald said the indictment drawn against him was a compliment to his administration. He said the charge "is evidence that I have been on the job for which I was elected—to aid agriculture and obtain fair prices for farm products."

He denied that he had acted outside his official capacity as head of the Texas Agricultural Department or had violated any law. He added that the indictment was "just politics."

The commissioner freely admitted having appeared before many congressional committees in attempts to obtain "fair prices" for farm products.

Spiritualist Indicted in $27,000 Theft

Mrs. Eulalia Matthews, 50, Washington spiritualist known as Madame Yvonne, was indicted yesterday by the Alexandria grand jury on a charge of grand larceny in the $27,000 Alexandria First National Bank theft last June.

Also indicted on a grand larceny charge was Mrs. Alice Briggs, 37, wife of David Briggs, former bank janitor, who was sentenced to eight years in jail last month after admitting he stole the money a year ago tomorrow.

About $9000 in checks turned up shortly after the theft, but the cash is still missing. Briggs said it was taken from a hiding place in a piano. Police claim Mrs. Briggs gave the money to Madame Yvonne.

Mrs. Briggs pleaded innocent, but Madame Yvonne entered no plea. Instead, her lawyers asked for a bill of particulars of the charges against her.

The grand jury also indicted 23 others, including William Brown, 57-year-old mechanic, charged with the fatal stabbing of Mrs. Hazel Waugh on June 1 in a rooming house at 413 Wilkes st.

Cleared by the grand jury of a charge of felonious assault was Mrs. Dorothy Harris, 35, of 822 Madison st., Alexandria.

Group Asks Recommittal Of Capone Pals

By The Associated Press

A House committee demanded yesterday that four former Capone gangsters, free on parole, be clapped back in Federal prison.

The House Expenditures Committee made a point of identifying two attorneys who represented the men as "personal" friends, respectively, of President Truman and Attorney General Tom Clark. The lawyers are Paul Dillon of St. Louis and Maury Hughes of Dallas.

The report said they were "in a position to exert influence with those in authority."

It added, however, that Dillon in testimony "denied that this boasted intimacy with the President was used in connection with these paroles, and the committee has adduced no evidence to indicate that President Truman had any knowledge of the matter."

The committee commented sharply that the Federal Parole Board had taken no action on the men since the expenditures group began its investigation seven months ago, and inquired:

Are "Influences Operating"?

"Can it be that the same influences which caused the paroles to be granted in the first place are still operating?"

The committee said it had no evidence that anybody had been bribed, but it reported a conclusion that big money was spent in getting the men out. It said it had failed to learn where the money came from. The former Chicago mobsters are Louis Campagna, Charles Gioe, Philip D'Andrea and Paul DeLucia, alias Ricca. They were freed August 11, 1947, after serving 3½ years each on 10-year terms for violation of the anti-racketeering laws. They were convicted in New York in 1944 of conspiring to extort $1,000,000 from motion picture interests on threats of violence and labor trouble.

DeLucia Rearrested

DeLucia was rearrested in Chicago for parole violation just before the committee's report was made public. United States Attorney Otto Kerner, jr., said there that the warrant was issued by the parole board. The board accused DeLucia of failure to make "full and truthful written reports" to the Supervisor of Paroles, and of failure to report correctly on how much money he was spending.

The House committee criticized the paroles as "improvidently granted." It said they should be recalled because of "fraudent concealment of facts."

It said the men did not tell 'the whole truth with reference to their previous criminal records" when they applied for parole.

'It is a legal axiom that fraud vitiates a transaction and that principle applies to the granting and revocation of a parole," the committee added.

The Parole Board promised the committee last week it will decide by June 19 whether to cancel the paroles.

Ricca Rearrested; Judge Releases Him

Chicago, June 16 (U.P.).—Paul (the waiter) Ricca, former Capone gangster, was arrested on parole violation charges today and then released by a Federal judge who denounced the interference of "politicians" in the case.

U. S. District Judge Michael L. Igoe issued a writ of habeas corpus for Ricca soon after the Chicago racket chieftain was seized at his swank River Forest, Ill., home.

Igoe issued the writ over the violent objections of U. S. District Attorney Otto L. Kerner jr., who said the court had no right to take such action.

The parole of Ricca and three other Capone mobsters last summer after serving only a third of their 10-year extortion sentences touched off a congressional investigation.

"This is a contest between Congress and the Parole Board," Igoe declared. "If it is true that this man has not violated his parole, I wonder whether it is just for Congress to be used as a whipping post by different politicians of different political faith."

Tax Case Reveals Numbers Background

these people didn't at least warn the taxpayer that he might get into trouble."

When Bettis admitted he was once arrested by District police on a gaming charge, Judge Chesnut asked the outcome of the case.

"It was nol-prossed," Bettis replied.

(Police records here showed he was arrested on March 5, 1942, on charges of operating a lottery, possession of lottery slips, and conspiracy to violate lottery laws. The records also showed the charges were marked off as nol-prossed at a later date.—Editor's note.)

The defendant said that his wife, Gladys, once was a teacher in the Prince Georges County schools. He has one child, a daughter, Mary Louise. He was born in Alabama, he said, and came to Washington about 1931 from Greensboro, N. C. He went to work as a hotel bellhop, and in 1935 became a numbers writer. When his "boss," the banker, went out of business, Bettis took over on a capital of about $1000, he said. He was then 24 years old.

When he quit the numbers in 1944, Bettis said, he was operating without any partners, with about 10 or 20 "pick-up men." He couldn't estimate how many numbers writers worked for him, he said, but their "take" was 30 per cent of the total bets they wrote each day.

The defendant appeared nervous in testifying, but showed more confidence in discussing his own records and figures on the numbers business.

He told Judge Chesnut he does not dispute owing the Government money, but said his books were in order. He said that before he was indicted he conferred with Treasury Department men, showed them his records, and said he'd "settle up" what they said he owed the Government.

"The next thing I knew," said Bettis, "I was indicted."

Referring to the defendant's own records, Judge Chestnut questioned why the defendant showed a net income for 1942 of but $2036, despite the fact that he listed among expenditures for the year: $3000 in bonds purchased, $12,000 paid off on mortgages, $9622 paid to the Government for back income taxes, and more than $6000 for living expenses.

Bettis said he couldn't account "for that," adding that he had turned everything over to an accountant and "assumed" the figures were correct (when he made his return for that year).

"I didn't go into that phase of it," he testified. "I just thought the books were correct."

His attorney, to show Bettis' good faith, said Bettis voluntarily went to the Treasury Department in 1938 and told them then he had not filed any returns since 1932, and asked their help.

Treasury Department agents, said Anderson, went over his records with him, and Bettis arranged to pay off the taxes due the Government in installments.

Records produced at the trial listed Bettis as owner, with his wife, of three dwellings and an apartment house in Northwest Washington. These included:

A brick dwelling at 921 P st. nw., assessed at $12,645; another brick dwelling at 416 K st. nw., assessed at $7104; a third at 1323 Hamlin st. ne., his home address, with garage, assessed at $9998, and the apartment house at 1111 Columbia rd. nw., assessed at $113,387.

Bettis testified he also bought a fifth property at about the same time, a home at 1832 H st. ne., which he gave to his mother. The properties, he said, are "nearly paid off."

Before the case comes up for final arguments Thursday, Anderson said, one more witness may be called. He refused to divulge the possible witness' name.

Wife Went to New York With His $80,000 After Locking Him Out, Keleher Testifies

John B. Keleher, 67, testified yesterday that after his 38-year-old wife locked him out in 1946, she went to New York with his $80,000 in his Cadillac and bought $6000 worth of clothes on his charge accounts.

Keleher took the District Court witness stand to contest action of his spouse, Anna T., who says "Everybody calls me Dolly."

She said she is $20,000 in debt and is threatened with eviction from her $172-a-month apartment in the Woodley Park Towers on Connecticut ave. nw.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts withheld judgment until he can examine the 300 pages of affidavits and exhibits.

Claims Reduced Income

Mrs. Keleher testified her husband is a gambler who clears $20,000 a month. He has spent time in jail for gambling activities.

But Keleher claimed that on January 1 he retired from his "business." He refused to testify as to its nature, on the grounds of possible self-incrimination. His 1947 income was $30,000 before taxes, but now it is only $1300 a month from investments, he testified.

Keleher, dapper and bronzed from two months in the Florida sun, said that "Dolly" kept the $80,000 despite his advice given over the phone from his suite in the Hotel 2400.

"I told her that it wasn't even a good investment to give up her income for a sum like $80,000. When she told me she had spent the $80,000 I told her she had also spent herself a husband."

During his testimony, Mrs. Keleher periodically gasped and pounded her hands on top of the flower-bedecked sailor straw she wore over her raven hair.

The case became especially bitter when Mrs. Keleher's attorney, James J. Laughlin, questioned Charles E. Ford, a lawyer who once represented her. Mrs. Keleher has sued Ford for $6450 which she says he took from her and failed to return.

In response to a Laughlin question, Ford said, "It's you I resent. You for filing such a suit and the bad publicity it caused me."

"You didn't see fit to answer the letter I sent you just before I filed the suit, did you," Laughlin countered.

Ford shouted back, "I never answer blackmail letters."

Laughlin replied "That's all you've done all your life, isn't it."

"I don't answer blackmail letters," Ford repeated.

Judge Has Texas in Rage

Amarillo, Tex., June 16 (AP).—Louis B. Conley of Amarillo, charged in Massachusetts with assault and kidnaping, was freed on $2500 bond here today because two Texans didn't like the way a Yankee judge described him.

Probate Judge Harry K. Stone of Brockton, Mass., last June issued a warrant charging that Conley was $600 in arrears in the support of his wife and child. Conley was charged by his wife in another court with assault and kidnapping their three-year-old daughter, Lynette.

The Brockton Enterprise-Times quoted the judge as describing Conley as "a typical Southern wife beater" in a speech from the bench.

"I've never known a Northern woman to marry one of these Southern gentlemen but what she got it in the neck," the judge was quoted.

Conley, 27, was jailed here Friday on Federal charges of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

Mayor Lawrence Hagy and William Freeman, Amarillo car dealer, signed his bond.

"I don't know the boy and I don't know anything about him," Freeman said, "but I got so mad at that sarcastic Yankee judge that I went right down to the jail and bailed Conley out."

"I hate to see advantage taken of a fellow from down here," Freeman said.

Whether Conley must go back to Massachusetts to face charges will be determined at a hearing in Federal court here July 19.

Wallace Schedules 11 Talks in 6 States

New York, June 16 (AP).—Henry A. Wallace plans 11 talks in six States in the next month in his third-party presidential campaign.

MAN CRAWLS IN ICEBOX

That's what a lot of us would like to do on scorching summer days. A much better idea is to serve delicious, frosty ROMA Wine Coolers.

To make ROMA Port Lemonade, dissolve ½ tablespoon of sugar in the juice of ½ lemon or 1 lime. Add ½ tall glass of ROMA California Port and stir well. Add ice cubes. Fill with plain ice water or chilled sparkling water. Stir and serve decorated with lemon or lime slice.

Be sure to use better-tasting ROMA, America's largest selling wine. Write ROMA Wine Co., 911 Hobart Building, San Francisco 4, California, for free ROMA Cooler recipes as seen in Life Magazine, June 21st.

20 Million Cameras Ready To Snap Away This Summer

By Ollie Atkins

IT SHOULD BE safe now to assume that summertime has at last arrived, and we can expect a season of picture snapping unsurpassed. Well over 20,000,000 cameras are in the hands of photographers in this country, the vast majority simple amateur models used mostly during vacation times.

Both monochrome and color films are in abundant supply this season. Most types of cameras are back on dealer's shelves and prices have leveled off.

Here are a few hints to improve your pictures this summer:

If you use a fixed-focus (box type) camera be sure to keep distance between camera and subject of main interest at least 12 feet or subject will be out of focus. Failing to keep proper distance and camera movement are causes of all box camera pictures with fuzzy appearance.

When making general views of beaches and mountains, use a filter to darken blue sky or bring out clouds in blue sky. The K-2 yellow filter gives normal correction. If sky is overcast, or in mountain mist or sunset scenes, there is no advantage gained by using any filter.

Hot sun overheats car interiors and is bad for camera and film.

Do not shoot directly into the sun or at an angle which allows direct sunlight to strike your lens. Flare from sunlight on your lens will flash onto the film during exposure and fog the picture.

Sand is an enemy of your camera. Salt water is a vicious destroyer of photographic gear, so carefully dry any equipment coming in contact with water, spray or wet hands.

If bright sunlight is casting heavy shadows under broad-rimmed beach hats use a flash bulb or reflecting boards to illuminate the shadow section, which otherwise will be badly underexposed.

Have your film processed immediately after the roll is exposed.

If you develop your own pictures make no compromise with time and temperature of developer. Correct temperature is exactly 68 degrees. Use of a chrome-alum rinse between developing and fixing film is a good idea.

Reticulation of film emulsions in hot weather may seem a dramatic pattern to a few photographers but I regard it as simply poor darkroom technique and wasted material.

The noonday sun in Washington is regarded as the example for all light and exposure standards, so charts estimating exposures will be useful guides if you do not have an electric cell exposure meter.

THE EASTMAN KODAK CO. has announced that all color print orders are now being returned to dealers by first-class mail or by parcel post, special delivery. This is expected to cut down mailing time and expedite delivery of color prints to customers.

Wind-up session of Dr. Jaffe's portrait class under sponsorship of the National Photographic Society will be conducted by P. F. Lambert and open to members, models and friends. Persons interested in attending this final session may get time and place from Miss Ann-Katrine Shaw, secretary of the society, 723 Upshur st. nw., Taylor 2037.

Try This, Cameraman . . .

A $75,000 increase in annual operating expenses was cited by owners of the mammoth Greenway housing development in Southeast Washington yesterday to justify a 10 per cent rent boost.

Tenants, in turn, testifying before Rent Control Examiner James G. Tyson at 1740 Massachusetts ave. nw., claimed that telephone service is poor, certain apartments are in need of redecorating and some units have cockroaches and bugs.

The hearing lasted seven hours, and fewer than 15 tenants remained for the closing testimony. About 50 appeared in the morning.

An early move by Joseph Forer, attorney for about 120 tenants, to have the hearing continued on the ground he'd had insufficient time to prepare the case and there was inadequate "service" of notices to tenants was quashed by the examiner. Tyson insisted throughout that the entire hearing be held yesterday "if we have to run past midnight."

Morris Cafritz, principal stockholder in the corporation that owns the 797-unit development, at Minnesota ave. and East Capitol st., appeared briefly to explain that a change in "economic" conditions had necessitated the rent hike petition.

John J. Wilson, attorney for the owners, presented figures to show the following increase in expenses—for 1947 and 1942: Salaries and wages, 39.7 per cent; repairs and maintenance, 81.9 per cent; real estate taxes, 17.3 per cent; fuel, 30 per cent; water, 58.3 per cent.

Tyson took the case under advisement and Forer announced that he "may" take it to court if the tenants lose. Rents currently run from $48.50 to $52 for one-bedroom units and from $58 to $61 for two-bedroom apartments, owners said.

Rain Maroons 4-H Clubbers As Camp Opens

Some of America's headiest, heartiest, handiest and healthiest youngsters couldn't figure out a way yesterday to escape from their island in the Raleigh Hotel lobby.

With all those h's, what else could they be but—you guessed it—4-H Club boys and girls. They were marooned by the rain in the Raleigh, where they arrived during the day to begin a week's first-hand look at their Government.

Last night, 192 strong, they attended the formal opening of the eighteenth annual National 4-H Club Camp at Departmental Auditorium. Before they leave the District, they'll probably know it better than most natives. Their crowded agenda includes just about everything there is to see and do here.

The youthful 4-H clubbers—they're mostly between 16 and 21—represent 47 States and Puerto Rico. Two boys and two girls are here from each State on the basis of their leadership, community service accomplishments, and attainment in 4-H agricultural and homemaking projects.

Today, the young rural leaders, and about 100 adult Extension Service 4-H workers who are also attending the camp, will hold sessions at the Agriculture Department, tour the White House, and visit the National Agricultural Research Center. They will attend another meeting at Departmental Auditorium tonight.

4-H Youths Check In . . .

The Washington Post

ABC Board Hears Pastor Defend Beer

Whisky is the woe of a pastor's flock, but a jug of wine or bottle of beer—that's different!

These were the sentiments expressed by the Rev. C. H. Richardson of Beth-Eden Missionary Baptist Church yesterday before a startled Alcoholic Beverage Control Board hearing.

ABC was considering protests against granting Albert and Minnie Kaplan a license to sell packaged beer and wine at 2600 Wade rd. se.

Leader of the opposition was the Rev. Mackey C. Carpentier, minister of Campbell Methodist Church, 2562 Nichols ave. se. After describing the evil effects the store would have on the neighborhood, he called for support from his ministerial colleague, Rev. Hickerson, ABC officials said.

But Rev. Hickerson, whose church may soon move to the neighborhood temporarily from 213 Virginia ave., strode to the stand, they said, and declared: "I'm not opposed to it." He said there was "nothing wrong" with the proposal so long as only beer and wine—not whisky—is sold, they reported.

Unabashed by this unorthodox behavior, the oppostion went on to present a 475-signature petition opposing the license.

Hearing Slated Monday On McLean Gardens

Public hearing on proposed rent increases at McLean Gardens housing development, Wisconsin ave. and Porter st. nw., will be held in the District Building board room at 9:30 a. m. Monday.

Rent Control Administrator Robert F. Cogswell explained that the case involves approximately 2000 tenants and sufficient space cannot be arranged at the Rent Control Office at 1740 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Owners of the development seek a $5-a-month boost for 1300 rooms and a straight 10 per cent increase for 720 apartments.

Sexual Behavior Of a Greek God

By Richard L. Coe

THE IMMORTAL GODS, the oh-so-mortal Greeks, the naughty French and the sharp S. N. Behrman combine to make an evening of highly civilized fun out at Olney. The play is Behrman's adaptation of Jean Giradoux's comedy, "Amphitryon 38," which once served the Lunts so handsomely.

What Behrman is saying in his impeccable style is that even the gods can envy the fleshly mortality of a wiser human. The thought of humans—at least one lovely human—divinely wise and the gods humanly foolish—makes delicious listening the way the able translator has given us Giradoux's version, the thirty-eighth to stem from a Grecian fable.

It is 11 years since the Lunts first played Behrman's version in London, after which they took their play home and toured the States with it for several seasons; the French, too, made a film version of the Giradoux play, which was good fun at our own Little. Unlike comedies of a decade ago, "Amphitryon 38" stands the test of time. Its literate lines sparkle as do few of the domestic comedies with which we lately have been inundated.

The Olney production should be in smooth working order by tonight; the opening performance wallowed for a time in uncertainty, though the choice second act was considerable improvement over the first. The settings—a cloud and some Theban palaces—are spectacular indeed for a country theater and the tricky business of making mere actor folk seem like the gods and heroes of Greek legend has been cleverly handled.

"AMPHITRYON 38." Richard Skinner, Redge Allen and Evelyn Freyman present the comedy by Jean Giradoux, adapted by S. N. Behrman. Staged by Harry Ellerbe. Settings by S. Syrjala. At the Olney Theater.

THE CAST

Jupiter	Ralph Clanton
Mercury	Donald Murphy
Sosie	Paul Keyes
Trumpeter	Neil Fitzgerald
Warrior	Dan Stapleton
Alkmena	Haila Stoddard
Amphitryon	Grant Gordon
Nevelia	Philippa Bevans
Kleantha	Mary MacArthur

Seen From a Cloud Bank

Giradoux begins his comedy by showing us Jupiter and Mercury floating on a cloud, peeping Toms attracted by the beauty of a Theban general's wife. The lady—Alkmena—is virtuous as she is beautiful, but Jupiter, having transformed the other mortals he has coveted into goddesses, yearns to possess her as a mortal.

Mercury, who is far cleverer than his father, works out a scheme whereby the lady's husband is called off to war; Jupiter assumes General Amphitryon's guise and manages to spend an evening with Alkmena—a long evening, charmingly lengthened by Mercury.

Their conversation on the breakfast couch the next morning causes Jupiter some worry. Alkmena vows to him, thinking he is her husband, that she would rather die than be unfaithful. Since this will interfere with the birth of an offspring Jupiter has decided to call Hercules, this poses rather a problem. Mercury has already announced to the priests and virgins of the temple that the head god has honored one of their ladies.

With womanly wisdom, Alkmena devises what she thinks is a way out. With the connivance of the Spartan Queen, Leda, who already has succumbed to Jupiter (he as a swan) Alkmena fixes things so that Leda spends the evening with the body she believes to be Jupiter's; in reality Amphitryon has returned.

Haila Stoddard Starred

How things works out, it takes Behrman's shining prose to relate. If you've forgotten or would like to hear it again, Olney has the answer.

Haila Stoddard's Alkmena has a wise-child quality, but her opening performance was far too fussy, a constant fiddling with flowing garments that took away much from Behrman's lines. Still, this may have been first performance jitters and by now one has no doubt that the pert, evocative Haila is giving Olney a smooth, lovely Theban.

The gods are lucky in the hands of Ralph Clanton and Donald Murphy, the Jupiter and Mercury. Murphy is particularly fine as the busy messenger, getting a great deal of humor from his readings despite an unpleasant dash of New Yorkese in his accent. Clanton's Jupiter has grand humor and you're certain to enjoy him.

Best of the opening night performances was certainly Neil Fitzgerald's trumpeter, exactly the sophisticated sort of reading this comedy needs. Maxine Stuart, too, is tip-top as the proud Leda. Her scene with Miss Stoddard, in which she proudly boasts that, as a result of her affair with the swan, the pear trees now bow before her, is delectable.

All in all, the Olney's "Amphitryon 38" is a literate treat. In hearing of the naughty, lusty behavior of our early forebears one couldn't ask for a more civilized guide than Behrman's prose.

Pat O'Brien in Keith's Film

'Fighting Father Dunne' Tells Of a Priest's Aid to Newsboys

OF KEITH'S "Fighting Father Dunne," little that is new can be said.

Pat O'Brien has the title role and from that you can tell that Dunne is an Irishman, a priest and a scrapper. For all its familiarity, the picture is knowingly made, well cast and exactly the tribute its makers evidently intended.

Back in 1905 Father Peter Dunne founded a home for the needy newsboys of St. Louis. His struggles with that familiar spectre, poverty, are overcome with Irish charm, churchmanly zeal and the determination of a brave heart.

From William Rankin's story Martin Rackin and Frank Davis have devised a screen play that catches the simple essence of a man's struggle to do something about man's inhumanity to man. Inferentially, Father Dunne's battle for the newsboys was a success that has made itself felt throughout the land. The Newsboys' Home of St. Louis still exists as the helpful institution Father Dunne dreamed of and the circulation street fights of 40 years ago are today so unusual as to be news when they do occur.

There is no incident in the film which you haven't seen before, though that, to be sure, is no reflection of the film's sincerity. A good many comic touches are in such skilled keeping as the wry good nature of Una O'Connor, the bluff of Arthur Shields (so very like his brother, Barry Fitzgerald, in this role); Charles Kemper and Anna Q. Nilsson, who appears as a Scandinavian storekeeper.

Darryl Hickman Scores

Apart from the knowledgable portrayal of O'Brien, the acting demands are on Darryl Hickman, as the black sheep of the boys Dunne helps. Young Hickman is fine and though the role is the usual one of a little tough guy, he brings an appealing freshness to the part. The love interest, while suggested with even more corn than the rest of the story, is not made much of; Myrna Dell, as a restaurant cashier and Jim Nolan, as an Irish cop, are the romantic figures.

Keith's short subjects include a visit to Florida's Boca Raton that will set you yearning for the rails; a choice Alpine adventure of Disney's Mickey, Donald and Pluto and the Universal-International newsreel.

Catholic Church Plans To Spend 10 Billions

Collegeville, Ind., June 16 (U.P.). The Catholic Church will spend 10 billion dollars on buildings in the United States during the next decade, a survey showed today.

The business and industry foundation of St. Joseph's College said its survey revealed that 1534 projects are pending. The program includes construction, remodeling, furnishing, equipment and maintenance.

The foundation said most of the money will be spent for hospitals and high schools, with churches in third place.

House Farm Bill Aid Sought in Senate

The Senate was asked last night to scrap its long-range farm program in favor of the stop-gap House bill which would continue wartime price supports for another 18 months.

The request was made by Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.), who is opposed to a bill recommended by the Senate Agriculture Committee to rewrite the Government's farm price support program and put it on a permanent basis.

Republican leaders held the Seante in overtime session to push the controversial issue closer to a final vote—possibly today.

It adjourned without acting on Russell's suggestion.

But a number of noncontroversial amendments were adopted. One would extend the life of the Commodity Credit Corporation one year beyond its scheduled June 30 expiration date. Another would require the agency to use a 338-million-dollar revolving fund to support prices of fruits and vegetables when necessary.

The wartime price support program, unless extended, will expire on December 31.

Synod Votes Mission Status To Negroes

The Southeastern District of the Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod, yesterday adopted a resolution bringing supervision of Negro churches under its mission board.

The action was taken at the sixth annual meeting of the district at Christ Lutheran Church, 16th and Gallatin sts. nw. About 150 delegates from churches in Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia and the District of Columbia are attending the sessions.

Work with Negro congregations has been under the direction of the Synodical Conference, with headquarters in St. Louis, in the past.

With the action yesterday, direction, supervision and expansion of the churches will be taken over by the Mission and Church Extension Board of the Southeastern District.

The change was requested by the Missionary Board of the Synodical Conference. More than 3000 church members in 14 congregations in the Southern District will be affected.

The district also received into membership the Pilgrim Lutheran Church, Westgate, Md., on condition that the congregation adopts a revised constitution.

A resolution raising salaries for missionaries in the district was sent back to committee for further study and will be acted upon today.

Pastor W. A. Westerman spoke to the district about his work at the Washington Mission for the Deaf and Herbert Thien of New York told of plans for a new Lutheran school fo rthe deaf to be located near Oyster Bay N. Y.

The convention will wind up today.

Methodists Open Parley

Albany, N. Y., June 16 (U.P.).—The opening session of the northeastern jurisdictional conference of the Methodist Church got underway here today with 324 delegates from New England States, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Washington, D. C., attending.

The conference will elect two new bishops to succeed Bishop Louis O. Hartman, of Boston, and Bishop James H. Straughn, of Pittsburgh. Both have reached retirement age.

Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam of New York will preside at a ceremony Sunday consecrating the bishops.

Compromise Bill Includes Funds For Supercarrier

Senate-House conferees last night agreed on a compromise $3,749,733,250 appropriation to keep the Navy ready for action during the 1949 fiscal year.

It includes funds to start work on a 65,000-ton super aircraft carrier capable of launching B-29's with atom bombs.

The House had voted $3,686,733,250 for the Navy. The Senate increased it by 125 million dollars. The conferees settled for about half of the increase.

The bill still is about 186 million dollars short of the amount President Truman thought was needed to run the Navy next year.

McGregor Again Blocks Land, Dredge Swap

For the second time, Representative J. Harry McGregor (R., Ohio) yesterday blocked House action on a bill permitting the Interior Department to swap dredging rights for a tract of land along the Mount Vernon Memorial highway. McGregor objected to the measure Coming up on the consent calendar.

The land, said to be worth $100,000, has been offered to the Government by the Smoot Sand & Gravel Co. provided that the company retain rights for dredging gravel for 30 years. McGregor wants to know how much the dredging rights are worth.

Rough Riders of '98 Plan Arizona Reunion

Prescott, Ariz., June 16 (AP).—Teddy Roosevelt's Rough Riders are going to ride again.

Half a century after their famous charge up San Juan Hill, the boys of '98 are getting together for a reunion—possibly their last—here June 24-25.

The reunion will center about the equestrain staute of their hero, Capt. William (Bucky) O'Neill, killed in the charge.

London, June 16 (U.P.).—Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin told the Commons today that Argentina and Chile have withdrawn from some positions in Antarctic territories whose possession they dispute with Britain.

H. W. Murray, Oceanographer, Kills Himself

Like everything he did during his lifetime, Harold W. Murray was conscientious and meticulous even in planning his own death.

Late Tuesday night, the 41-year-old Government oceanographer retired to the bedroom of his comfortable home at 4116 17th st. nw., prepared the rifle which he used for the infrequent recreation he permitted himself and pulled out a copy of "Modern American Medical Adviser."

Turning to the page which contained a heart diagram, he planned the shot which would make death instantaneous. Then, a few minutes after 10, he pulled the trigger.

The police were summoned by his grief-stricken wife, Mrs. Mabel F. Murray, and began reconstructing the situation. Yesterday Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald examined the evidence and issued a certificate of suicide.

Why did he do it?

Two close friends blamed the scientist's attitude toward his work. "He was very able, very conscientious—that was one of his troubles, I guess," declared Harold R. Edmonston, Mr. Murray's immediate superior at the Coast and Geodetic Survey.

Another friend of long standing, Charles L. Miller of 1658 Euclid st. nw., said, "Harold took his work too seriously. He let it get him down."

Mr. Murray distinguished himself in his chosen field. After graduating from Bucknell University and doing graduate work at George Washington University, he joined the Coast and Geodetic Survey.

He authored several monographs on oceanography and as a result was made a fellow in the Geological Society of America. He was also a member of the American Geophysical Union, the Geological Society of Washington, the Philosophical Society and the Masonic Order.

Surviving are his wife; two sons, Harold W. jr., and H. Martin; a sister, Miss Gladys S. Murray of Philadelphia, and his mother, Mrs. May S. Murray of Newville, Pa.

Funeral services will be held in Milton, Pa., at 2 p. m. Saturday. Burial will follow there.

Nats Make It Interesting, But Lose 6-5

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THE NEW GIMMICK in the selection of the major league All-Star teams by popular vote of the fans is the restriction that the fans can't vote on the pitchers. Choosing the pitchers is the exclusive privilege of the two All-Star managers who, on July 13, will be Bucky Harris and Leo Durocher.

POVICH

A couple of years ago, the big leagues voted to give the game back to the fans who originally voted on the make-up of the American and National League teams, until the brass hats in their doubtful wisdom decided to let the 16 managers pick the players. What was supposed to be the fans' game became the managers' game, and it lost popularity and so the fans were declared in again.

That is, the fans, as we were saying, were invited to pick their men in every position except the pitchers. The game hasn't gone completely back to the customers. Just wherein the managers are better able to make a better choice of pitchers than are the fans is doubtful. The records are a public property and if they lie in some respect the fans know as well as the managers in what degree a won-and-lost record is false. The baseball fan knows more about his game than the fan of any other sport.

IF THE FANS did pick the pitchers, it would relieve the managers of an embarrassment that always attends the job of managing an All-Star team. The manager usully has to call on some All-Star pitcher to work out of turn and if that pitcher is of a pennant-contending club, the yelp follows that it's a dirty trick. In fact, the National League has been guilty of starting second-string pitchers to avoid such embarrassment.

Even last year in the All-Star game at Chicago, American League Manager Joe Cronin drew some beefs when he used four pitchers, two of them Frank Shea and Joe Page of the Yankees, to beat the National Leaguers. He didn't use any of his Red Sox pitchers, and the charge was he was saving 'em for the more important league games to come.

National League President Ford Frick finally had to crack down on the practice of his managers who were not using their top pitchers in the All-Star game. He raised particular hell some years back when, in the game at Cleveland, Manager Frankie Frisch with Dizzy Dean available, started Bill Walker, a second-stringer of the Cardinals, and got the N. L. licked again. Frick has told his league to get serious about the All-Star game and doesn't like the idea of the A. L. winning 10 of the 14 games thus far.

LIKE THE MANAGERS, the fans aren't completely swayed by the batting or pitching averages. They know who the stars are, even when the figures say that Joe Bloke is outhitting Joe DiMaggio by 40 points. They want DiMaggio in there nevertheless, even as do the managers who can look at Joe's .285 average and still declare that he's the toughest guy in baseball to get out, if Ted Williams isn't.

There were weaknesses in the manager's selections, too. All too often they were constrained to reserve opinion on young ball players who, by All-Star time may have been setting either league on fire. They don't cotton easily to these recent flashes, but the fans do, and it's the vote of the fans that will guarantee that such as Richie Asburn, the kid sensation of the Phillies, will get in the lineup.

Bob Feller isn't having one of his good years. He's only the third leading pitcher on the Cleveland Indians at this point, but you can bet that both the fans and the managers want him in there before they would take his colleagues, Bob Lemon and Gene Bearden. The averages give way to big names when it comes to the All-Star game.

THE ALL-STAR GAME has become a fixture of the midsummer sports calendar despite what you might call the resistance of baseball's brass hats, who never liked the idea to start with. When they did consent to such a game back in 1933 at the request of Sports Editor Arch Ward of the Chicago Tribune, it was with limitations and as a concession to Chicago's World Fair of which it was to be a cofeature.

Originally the baseball people pointed out that it was a game not to be repeated but when New York staged its World Fair a year later such pressure was brought to bear that they consented to another All-Star game in New York. Then the baseball people discovered that they had happened on such a popular feature of the baseball season they couldn't let go of it in subsequent years.

So now it's an accepted part of every baseball season, and a three-day hiatus is the regular major league schedule is always provided so the game can be staged. The managers are now chosen by rote—they're always the pennant-winning managers of the year before, barring such a situation as finds Durocher replacing Burt Shotton. But it's always the day when the grandstand managers come closest to calling the tune.

3-Run Rally In 8th Wins For Browns

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

St. Louis, June 16.—Gerry Priddy, who's sorry the Nats saw fit to sell him to the Browns this year, tonight made the Nats sorry that they did it.

He smacked out three singles and a double to big-wheel the attack that gave the Brownies a 6-5 victory here before 5273 fans.

Three of his hits launched Brownie rallies and he himself scored three times. While Priddy was setting up the offense, it remained for Center Fielder Paul Lehner to supply the clout that extended the Washington losing streak to five in a row.

Scarborough Victim

Hitless on his first three trips, Lehner walloped a two-run double in the eighth when the Browns scored three runs to recapture a lead they twice had lost.

Ray Scarborough, who relieved a faltering Mickey Haefner in the eighth, was the victim of Lehner's untimely, for the Nats, two-baser.

The Nats threw a good scare into the Brownies in the ninth when they had runners on second and third with only one out, but Gil Coan took a called third strike and Earl Wooten grounded out to leave their mates stranded.

Browns Score Early

The Brownies didn't dally with Haefner, jolting him for a couple of runs in the first after he had retired Dillinger and Zarilla. Priddy beat out an infield hit and Whitey Platt followed with his fifth homer of the year, a poke that sailed into the left field stands, 351 feet away.

Right-Hander Fred Sanford, chased by the Nats six days ago in seven innings, didn't last that long tonight. He was out of the ball game in the third when the Nats ganged up on him for three runs to take the lead. Walks to Jake Early and Haefner and Eddie Yost's double to right brought the Nats run No. 1. Al Kozar made it 3-2, Washington, on the next pitch with a line single to right.

Biscan Stops It

Gil Coan grounded out, but Sanford walked Stewart and out he came in favor of Biscan, who stopped the rally by inducing Vernon to force Stewart at second.

Haefner held the Brownies scoreless until the sixth when Priddy lashed out his third straight hit, a lead-off double which soon became St. Louis' third run. Catcher Roy Partee stroked the single to score Priddy, whom Haefner wild-pitched to third, and tie up the game.

Four more Nat hits in the eighth added up to two more runs. Pinch-hitter Tom McBride chased in Gil Coan, who had singled, with a double, and pinch-hitter Al Evans scored McBride with a single.

Staked to a lead again, Haefner once more couldn't hold it as the Browns charged right back with three runs to win. Priddy was a big gun in this attack, too, following Zarilla's double with a single which expelled Haefner in favor of Ray Scarborough.

Scarborough got home run hitter Platt on a fly, but pinch-hitter Joe Schultz singled Zarilla home. After Bingo Binks, fanned, Lehner smashed his game-winning double.

IN SHORT . . . Priddy was batting .283 entering tonight's game and his four-for-four upped his mark to near the .300 mark . . . Brownie Coach Fred Hoffman was chased by Umpire Ed Murley in the sixth for rustling up a disturbance—against Hurley—from the Brown bench. . . . The families of Mark Christman and Mickey Haefner, who live here, saw the game, upping the attendance from 5270 to 5273 . . . For tomorrow night's finale it's Walter Masterson against Cliff Fannin.

Stevens to Umpire

Robert Stevens, former All-High shortstop at Western High who later played for Newark in the International League and for the Philadelphia Athletics, last night was elected to membership in the Washington Baseball Umpires Association.

Russians Ignore Olympic Deadline, Stick to Bragging From Behind 'Iron Curtain'

By Robert Musel

LONDON, June 16 (U.P.).—Soviet Russia, apparently unwilling to suffer a prestige defeat in international competition, allowed its last chance to enter the Olympics pass unnoticed at midnight (7 p. m. EDT) tonight.

The 1948 Olympic committee closed the books on all entries for the summer games at that hour and pending final compilation, the record-breaking entry probably will reach 6000 athletes from 60 nations.

Russia's refusal to participate had been expected since a high Soviet sports official commented in Oslo, Norway, two months ago that his nation was not yet ready for international athletic competition.

However, the committee, headed by Lord Burghley, was unwilling to announce the refusal in hope Russia would fall in line at the last minute with the Olympic ideal that victory is less important than a friendly meeting of nations.

BUT EVEN WITHOUT Russia, the fourteenth Olympiad will be the greatest in the history of the games—ancient or modern—although Lord Burghley, an Olympic champion himself, has indicated his disappointment that his personal visit to Moscow over a year ago failed to sway men who apparently were trying to project athletic achievement into a political football.

Russia still is recovering from the effects of a devastating war and, naturally, was not expected to challenge the United States or Sweden in track and field.

However, it is known there is tremendous sports activity underway in Russia's big chain of republics and reports have told of athletic competitions involving fantastic numbers of competitors.

With hundreds of thousands believed in training, it is inconceivable to experts that Russia has not or will not soon develop some of the world's best athletes. Olympic officials now believe she will keep her stars under wraps for a triumphant entry into the 1952 games when her own satellite nation, Finland, is host to the other countries.

VETERAN SPORTS observers regard Russia's occasional revelations from behind her "athletic curtain" as most tantalizing. Radio Moscow claimed today a new world javelin record for women and in the past month it was mentioned three new weightlifting marks.

At the world's weightlifting championships in Paris last year, Russia produced a phenomenal lifter, Bottle-legged light heavyweight Grigori Novak and her team was a close second to the United States.

The Russian women's track and field athletes, from their performances in the European championships in Oslo last year, are a match for any nation in field events

Russia claims she has a 52-foot shot-putter, a 24-foot broad jumper and sprinters who come close to the accepted world 100-yard dash record.

Wapinsky Withdraws From GW After Confab With Authorities

Joe Wapinsky of George Washington University, who was barred from further competition in the Southern Conference Tuesday because he admitted playing professional baseball, yesterday withdrew from the school.

Announcement of the 22-year-old sophomore's withdrawal came after an hour-long meeting among Wapinsky, Athletic Director Max Farrington, Dr. B. H. Jarman, registrar, Dr. Mitchell Dreise and Dr. Ralph Kennedy. The last-named three comprise G.W.'s committee on athletics.

Farrington said Wapinsky was "not expelled." He refused to comment on whether Wapinsky volunteered his withdrawal or whether the idea originated with the committee. "I don't see where that's important," said Farrington.

Wapinsky was not available for comment.

Before yesterday's meeting, Wapinsky said he wanted to remain at G.W., earn a degree in physical education and then take up coaching. He said that he was going through with plans to take six hours of study per week through the summer.

The Oil City, Pa., club of the Middle Atlantic League, which still owns Wapinsky's baseball contract, yesterday dispatched King Lear, a Chicago White Sox scout, to Washington to contact the G. W. star. Oil City is a farm club of the White Sox.

Quinn Beats Davis in Navy Boxing Finals

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Leon Daugherty, 17-year-old Armstrong High senior, won most of the cheers and a unanimous decision over the Navy's welterweight champion, Hank Herring, last night at Uline Arena.

The bout stole the show on the 16-bout program, after which the Navy's boxing coaches chose their 16-man delegation to the final Olympic trials in Boston June 28.

A crowd of 1658 saw the angular Daugherty, an underdog, peck away for the first two rounds. Then midway in the third, Daugherty decided to slug it out, and pulled through on even terms.

Winner Staggered

Herring, who bears a facial resemblance to Henry Armstrong, got in his best licks near the end of the first round. The heavier puncher of the two, Herring staggered Daugherty with rights to the head.

It was only the fifth loss in 56 fights for Herring, who has held the Navy's welterweight title for two years. Despite last night's loss he'll compete in the Olympic finals.

Four other Navy champs appeared on the relatively tame program, which was completely devoid of knockouts.

One of the titlists, Jimmy Ithia, a featherweight, was outstabbed by Johnny Kamber of Guam. Kamber was the lad whom Ithia defeated to take the crown. It was only the second loss in 22 fights for Ithia.

The other champs, Flyweight Jimmy Quinn of Great Lakes, Bantamweight Billy Bossio of the Cruiser U.S.S. Albany, and Light-Hevayweight Jimmy De Pena of Annapolis, won decisions.

FLYWEIGHT—Verna Ford (Camp Pendleton, Calif.) decisioned Alejandro Santos (Guam); Jimmy Quinn (Great Lakes) decisioned Red Davis (Camp Lejeune, N. C.).

BANTAMWEIGHTS—Gil Sanchez (San Diego, Calif.) decisioned Al Glover (USS N. A. Bass); Perfecto Williams (San Diego, Calif.) decisioned Don Cummings (U.S. PCE 904); Billy Bossio (USS Albany) defisioned Bobby Chabot (Great Lakes).

LIGHT HEAVYWEIGHTS—Jimmy De Pena (Severn Command) decisioned King Oliver (Hawaii); Eddie Hardy (Atlantic Fleet) decisioned Bob Weaver (Anacostia).

HEAVYWEIGHT—Jimmy Jones (Norfolk) decisioned Art Raby (Cleveland); Charlie Norkus (Brooklyn) decisioned Keith King (Quantico).

Branca Hurls 2-Hitter; Wins Over Reds, 4-3

Brooklyn, June 16 (AP).—Carl Furillo singled with one out and the bases full in the ninth inning to drive in Marvin Rackley from third with the run that gave the Brooklyn Dodgers a 4-3 victory over the Cincinnati Reds tonight.

Ralph Branca went the route for his seventh victory of the season. He had a no-hitter for 7 2-3 innings

Williams Leads Bosox to Win Over Feller

Cleveland, June 16 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox pounded Cleveland's Bob Feller to his fifth straight defeat today, 7 to 4, with a barrage of 13 hits, including seventh-inning homers by Ted Williams and Bobby Doerr.

Williams, with a walk, two doubles and a single in his other turns at bat, had a perfect day at the plate. His thirteenth homer sailed over the left-field fence with Johnny Pesky on base through a walk. Stan Spence then singled, and Doerr clouted his seventh circuit blow of the season.

Ken Keltner pounded the ball deep into the lower left-field stands in the fifth inning for his fifteenth home run, the Tribe's first tally off Right Hander Joe Dobson, who yielded six other hits. Three of them came in the eighth when Joe Gordon bounced a two-run double off the left-field fence after singles by Hank Edwards and Lou Boudreau.

The loss was Feller's seventh, against five wins. He hasn't won a game since May 19.

Cub Homers Top Braves, 8-5

Boston, June 16 (AP).—Home runs by Eddie Waitkus and Andy Pafko and some good relief pitching by Emil Kush today enabled the Cubs to defeat the Boston Braves, 8 to 5, the first decision for the Chicagoans over the Tribe in eight games this season.

The loss left the Braves in a tie for first place with the Pittsburgh Pirates. The Braves held the top position by a one-game margin before today's defeat.

Rider Falls Twice but Is Unhurt

Charles Town, W. Va., June 16.—Fleetest, a mare who rose from the local ranks to win in stake company in Maryland, returned to the scene of her early triumphs today. She was successful and won the Fraternal Order of Eagles Purse. The race could have been called the fraternal order of the ducks purse for the running strip was more suitable for ducks than horses.

Racing in the colors of Wayne Kendrick, of Washington, D. C., Fleetest was up in the final jumps to take the decision by a head margin from the Shangri La Stable's recently-acquired Rugged. In third position came B. F. Dishman's Sunny River. A field of eight competed.

Fleetest, handled by Jockey Jimmy Baird, was making her first start of the season and there was some doubt about her fitness. As a result, she paid a $6 mutuel. The 7-year-old mare was clocked in 1:22 3/5.

Palumbo Falls Twice

The track was as sloppy as the interior of a mortar mixer. Jockey Sammy Palumbo was unhurt but took two mud baths during the program. He fell from A. L. Beach's Snow Phantom after the finish of the feature, after falling with Mrs. Emma Downs' Joy Wes at the first turn in the fourth event.

In the feature, Rugged went to the front in the opening stages of the six and a half furlongs test. Sunny River and Sweepson were closest to the pace with Fleetest being steadied and in fourth position.

Rugged drew out on his closest rivals leaving the back stretch but Fleetest rallied and came on with a bold rush. At the final bend, she went far out and appeared to have lost her chance. However, Baird straightened her and in the final drive she wore down Rugged right on the wire.

Two Suspensions

The day brought a disqualification and two jockey suspensions. Jockey Clarence Wright was given ten days for carrying Second Sight wide into the stretch while aboard Bulrushes in the fifth race. Bulrushes was disqualified and placed second, the victory going to Second Sight at $7.40.

Jockey Pat O'Brien also was suspended for ten days for cutting over on Mintmaster in the fourth race and, according to the stewards, being an accessory before the fact of Palumbo's spill.

Jockey Wright escaped serious injuries in the seventh race but his mount H. Yongama's Shoot First, had to be destroyed. Shoot First, apparently blinded by the mud, ran into the fence and knocked over the five-eighths pole, tossing Wright into the air. The boy was shaken up and suffered from shock.

Kratz 'Scrubs' Way to New Job

Steeplechase Jock Shining on the Flat

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

THEY LAUGHED when Freddie Kratz sat down to ride. And they howled in glee when he went into action looking the part of an animated pretzel.

"Wash Board" Kratz they dubbed him, and not without reason, for he looked like he was doing the family laundry, pumping his hands on either side of the horse's head as if he were going to scrub his knuckles to the bone.

True, Freddie wasn't much to look at, even in the parade to the post, appearing to be a Loudoun County landowner on the way to a fox hunt. However, looks proved to be deceiving in Kratz's case.

It wasn't long after the meeting opened at Charles Town that Freddie had the unbelievers laughing on the other side of their faces. Despite his unorthodox and, at times crude style, Kratz began piling up a series of winners.

The wise guys said "He's a flash in the pan" but after 27 days of action in the West Virginia mountains Freddie is still cooking on the front burner and there's a flash smile on his pan these days.

He has been averaging better than a win a day and has the crowd up Shenandoah Valley way cheering him with more vigor than they used to boo Sammy Palumbo.

FREDDIE KRATZ
Hot and Not So Heavy

Kratz's success is not an accident.

Last winter was a hard one for the 27-year-old rider. His wife, Daisy, and Little Frederick, now 2, were living in the family trailer over by Pimlico and Freddie was finding it tough to feed all the mouths.

He determined to go get to the top of the jockey heap one way or another. Freddie learned to ride steeplechase horses around his native Hatboro, Pa. He went on to be a better than fair jumping pilot, being under contract to Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's big stable. In fact, it was in a steeplechase handicap that Kratz rode his first winner.

Freddie decided that instead of the few-and-far-between chances of riding in steeplechases, he would take a fling on the flat, where the big money beckoned.

Wise Guys Fooled At Charles Town

When the horses began preparing for the season at Pimlico Kratz was the busiest man on the grounds. It was a slow day for him when he didn't work out 10 to 12 thoroughbreds. He amused the track gang, too.

Not only was his saddle funny in their opinion, but they couldn't understand him. Kratz, after working out a horse stabled on the backstretch, would jog over to a barn behind the stands, a good quarter of a mile away. A little while later he would be seen running across the infield again.

One wisecracker remarked, "the fellow acts like he's swallowed a lively ball."

When Kratz came to Charles Town he didn't have an agent. None wanted him, so he added getting his own mounts to his daily tasks. It was hard at first to convince trainers of his ability but now they are flocking to him, eager for his services.

The Kratz trailer was hauled up here by a truck because he didn't have a car of his own. Now he has a lot more than a down payment but the auto will have to wait. He's still content to jog over to the track.

The future? Freddie is going to Havre De Grace—all 116 pounds of him. He hopes to ride winners there and perhaps hitch his star to the big time. If not—he will go to the Maryland half-milers.

He's improving with every race here. He's got the heart. All he needs is polish.

Yes, Kratz is giving the wise guys the horse laugh these days.

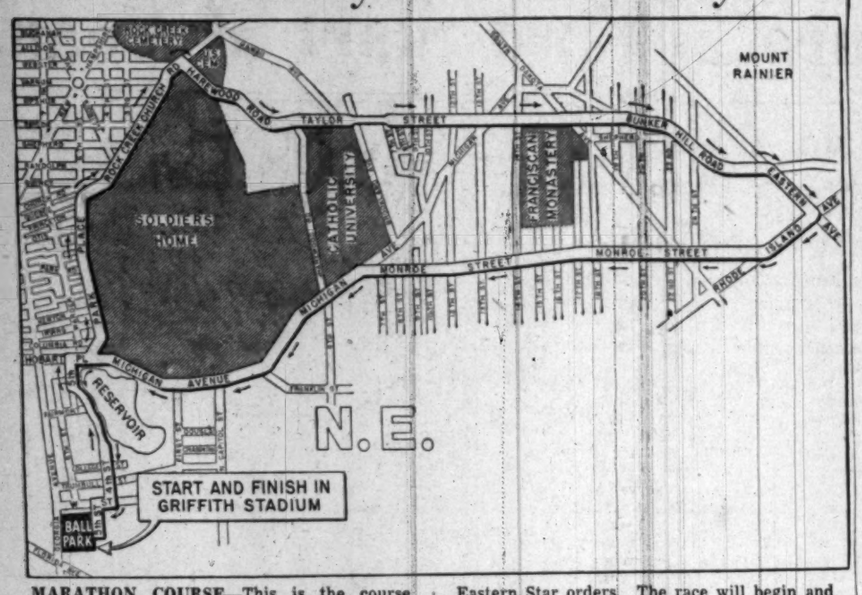
10-Mile Record May Be Set Here Friday



MARATHON COURSE—This is the course over which a 10-mile modified marathon race will be run June 18 as part of the Night of Thrills pageant, sponsored by Masonic and Eastern Star orders. The race will begin and end in Griffith Stadium. Forty-four runners have entered, some from as far off as Texas and California

After 10 miles of pounding over Washington's streets, sponsors of Friday night's modified marathon run in connection with the Masonic Night of Thrills expect a new record to go into the District A. A. U. books.

John Leiss, conducting the event and also running in it said yesterday anything can happen with 44 of the country's top long-distance stars in action.

Starting at Griffith Stadium, where another event on the program will be a baseball double-header listing Silver Spring De-Molay versus Alexandria DeMolay, and Martin Bombers versus Quantico, marathon runners will take three laps around the park before starting out on a measured course over city streets. The finish will also be at the stadium.

Dillard Ruled Ineligible By NCAA

Minneapolis, June 16 (AP).—Harris Dillard, Baldwin-Wallace's threat to world's high hurdles records, is not eligible to compete in the National Collegiate Athletic Association track and field meet here this weekend, the NCAA ruled today.

Prof. Hugh Willett, chairman of the NCAA eligibility committee, and member of the University of Southern California faculty, who disclosed the ruling, gave no indication the rule would apply to other athletes scheduled for competition.

Also declared ineligible by the committee was Bob Likens of San Diego State, defending javelin champion. However, Likens hadn't submitted his entry for the NCAA meet.

Willett said the NCAA holds that Dillard has competed in more than three "varsity years," in violation of association rules.

DiHard, holder of the unofficial world's record time for the 120-yard high hurdles, has been considered a top possibility for the United States Olympic team. As a result of today's ruling, he will have to compete in the National Amateur Athletic Union's meet in Milwaukee July 2 and 3 to qualify for a position.

Caraway Boxes In Alexandria

A 12-bout amateur boxing card, sponsored by B'nai B'rith in cooperation with St. Marys Boys Club, is slated tonight at 8:30 at George Washington High gymnasium in Alexandria.

Heading the bill is the featherweight bout between Jimmy Caraway, former District Golden Gloves and A. A. U. champion, and Richard (Kid) Rawlett of St. Mary's. Caraway, 23-year-old former coal miner, will have the edge in experience on Rawlett, who is only 16, and held the District A. A. U. novice title in 1946. This will be Caraway's last fight before he turns professional this summer.

In the semifinal Hugh Lyons, St. Mary's 120-pounder, battles Enrico Magnatto from Southeast Washington. Proceeds of the card will go to the Alexandria Police Boys Club summer camp fund.

Cameo Can Win Post Title Today

With yesterday's Washington Post-Industrial League game rained out, the first-half championship may be decided today when Cameo and Sunnybrook tangle on the West Ellipse at 5:30.

A Cameo victory will sew up first-half honors for the furnituremen, but a Sunnybrook win will make Friday's Sunnybrook-Naiman game decisive, the winner tying Cameo for the crown.

An Open Letter to AMERICA'S DOCTORS

Along with everyone else, we have seen your profession frequently referred to, in cigarette advertising.

Surely, it seems to us, you'd rather not have your honored calling used to support any particular cigarette; used to imply that any one brand has special virtues for the treatment of noses, throats, colds, or whatnots.

We're Tobacco Men...
Not Medicine Men

So Old Gold "cures" just one thing: the world's best tobacco.

That's why we tell smokers: no other cigarette can match Old Gold's span of experience – nearly 200 years – in selecting, curing, blending choice tobaccos.

No other cigarette can give more smoking enjoyment than a smooth, mellow, tasty Old Gold!

We are sure you'll approve our belief that the writing of prescriptions should be left where it belongs... to recognized medical men. But to those who smoke, we are content to say:

For a TREAT instead of a TREATMENT

Old Shooting Seen Linked To Gambling

2 Woundings Jan. 8 In Brass Rail Draw Witnesses Before Special Grand Jury

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Washington's gambling probers yesterday turned their attention to a five-month-old shooting, reputed to be one of the incidents which touched off the local gambling investigation.

This was the first public indication that the special grand jury probe has gone very far beyond the "ground laying" stage of the inquiry since the jury was impaneled May 17.

The shooting, which was later reported to have "extensive implications," took place January 8 in the Brass Rail, 1739 7th st. nw. Police reported that Charles Henry Nelson, 39, of 1803 H st. ne., and Henry M. Leake, 39, of 104 R st. ne., shot at each other after an undisclosed "altercation." Nelson was shot in the right chest and Leake was hit in the back.

Charged With Attempt to Kill

On April 20, Nelson and Leake were indicted by the regular grand jury on charges of attempting to kill each other.

In 1935, police records show, Leake was fined $100 for permitting gaming, and in 1937 he was sentenced to 90 days in jail for operating a lottery. If the January 8 shooting involved a numbers writing dispute, it would be the most recent known incident in which gambling has led to major crime, and for this reason may have been part of the background of the current gambling investigation.

Yesterday, the special grand jury heard testimony from Detective Sergt. Reuben R. Nichols of the robbery squad, and was believed to have questioned him about incidents growing out of the Brass Rail shooting.

While he refused to make any comment on this, his brother, Charles Nichols, 36, of 1226 C st. se. a Capital Transit Co. janitor, said he was asked by the grand jury to confirm a conversation between Reuben Nichols and a man associated with the Brass Rail.

Second Detective Quizzed

Charles Nichols was followed into the grand jury room by Detective M. A. Dixon, partner of Reuben Nichols on the robbery squad. Dixon said he was asked about once accompanying Reuben Nichols to talk to a man from the Brass Rail.

The jury also heard testimony from Lieut. Daniel D. Pittman, of the Thirteenth Precinct, who is the first and only Negro on the police force to reach that rank. Pittman declined to say whether he also was questioned about the Brass Rail shooting.

Sergeant Nichols was before the grand jury for about two hours, while Pittman testified for more than an hour.

Other witnesses yesterday were Mattie Thomas, 36, of 30 N st. ne.; Ida M. Powell, 43, of 1122 7th st. ne., and Mrs. Altha L. Jackson, 60, of 1737 Kalorama rd. nw. All three women, indicted on numbers charges, have recently changed their pleas from "not guilty" to "guilty," and are now awaiting sentence. All testified briefly.

Man, Wife, Girl Held In Numbers Raid

In what was described as another case of police undercover men posing as numbers writers to gain the confidence of "real" gamblers, three persons yesterday were arrested in a raid at 56 Patterson st. ne.

They were Mrs. Louise E. Johnson, 43, and her husband, Lell Johnson, 49, both of 56 Patterson st. ne., and Miss Novella Coghill, 21, who gave her address as 30 Patterson st. ne.

Vice Squad Chief Roy Blick said his undercover men approached Johnson more than a week ago, saying, "Things were tight," and they wanted someone to handle their numbers plays. Lieutenant Blick said Johnson met them at another point in the city, and then, gaining confidence, later agreed to meet them at his home yesterday. The raid followed, and police seized marked money and numbers slips, and a revolver said to belong to Johnson.

The Johnsons were both charged with operating a lottery and possession of numbers slips, and released under $1500 bond each for appearance today before U. S. Commissioner Needham C. Turnage. Miss Coghill, charged with possession of numbers slips, was freed in $500 bond for appearance in Police Court today.

Montgomery Schools Figure Cut $611,000; Tax Rate Kept at $1.88

$6,135,246 Budget Adopted; Board Is Warned Against Reducing Services

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

Montgomery County commissioners yesterday adopted a $6,135,246 county budget which slashed school funds $67,000 more than County Supervisor I. G. McNayr had recommended. The total reduction was $611,000.

The commissioners retained the county's present $1.88 tax rate.

The additional school appropriations cut came as a surprise, following less than 24 hours a public hearing at which nearly 1000 Montgomery residents had demanded the schools be given the $3,429,000 they had requested.

School Board Warned

The commissioners accompanied their extra cut with a warning to the school board that the funds would be used as designated, without elimination of school services, or court action would result.

The budget as adopted—the most controversial in the county's history—granted the school board $2,818,468, or $611,000 less than the board's request. Supervisor McNayr, in his budget proposals, had recommended $2,885,468, or $544,000 less than the board's request.

The schools appropriation, however, represents an increase of about $420,000 over the present budget.

After McNayr had made his recommendations, the School Board rallied public support with an announcement it would have to eliminate many school services, including kindergartens, and proposed teacher pay raises.

Pressure Charged

Some county commissioners, who began getting letters, telegrams and phone calls from school supporters, charged the school board was using "pressure tactics."

In discussing the threatened court action if the school board eliminates any services and pays teachers higher salaries, Supervisor McNayr said there is "plenty of precedent for such action."

Commission President Brooke Johns commented: "I defy the school board to show the need for cutting services in the face of the extra money we are giving them."

The budget, as adopted, makes no provision for requested police pay increases and provides for continued operation of the county alms house. McNayr had recommended against the police pay raises and urged closing the alms house.

McNayr had proposed a 5-cent increase in the county tax rate, which would have returned an additional $125,000. McNayr said after yesterday's commission meeting, the commissioners had whittled the sum from various departments.

Bulk of the reduction, he said, came by eliminating $67,000 to the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission and the $67,000 to schools.

The supervisor said the budget, as adopted, provides for an average teacher salary of $3800, increases to all teachers of between $100 and $200, the hiring of 50 additional teachers and the continued operation of all school services.

Informed of the commissioners' action and the final budget figure, School Board President H. Stanley Stine said:

"The school board will stand on its legal rights in asking the commissioners to submit in writing the reason for each of the cuts. We will have to eliminate services and will accumulate the funds they give us to give teachers the best possible salaries they can get as far as is legally possible at the expense of other services."

Recreation Program Approved Over Protests on Segregation

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Over the protests of two Negro members, the Board of Education yesterday gave the Recreation Department a free hand to run summer programs at 79 schools and playgrounds.

George E. C. Hayes and Mrs. Velma G. Williams said they opposed recreational use of the facilities because the Recreation Department has declared it will segregate use.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the board, joined Albert E. Steinem, chairman of a board committee which has held two public hearings on recreational policy, to bring the matter out of committee and before the full board.

Mrs. Doyle said she was acting to give 80,000 Washington children a place to play this summer.

Negro Member Differs

John Wilson, the third Negro member of the board, approved granting the facilities after declaring that he was "as opposed as anyone to segregation."

"But I will not put myself in the position of denying children, black or white, playgrounds," Wilson said.

Steinem said that still before his committee is testimony gathered at the hearings on whether the Board of Education should order the Recreation Board to permit interracial groups use of school buildings and grounds. His committee will prepare a recommendation for the full board, Steinem said.

Hayes told other board members that he found segregation in recreation "a travesty on everything just, reasonable and democratic."

He said he was convinced that Congress did not intend that recreation be segregated in the District.

"It is a backward step," Hayes said, "to turn over facilities to a board that announces it will indulge in segregation."

The board also voted to hear at a future meeting a delegation of students from the Bell Vocational School after Board Member Adelbert W. Lee criticized Associate Superintendent of Schools Lawson J. Cantrell for suggesting the boys ask for a hearing.

Lee said that Cantrell should have told the boys, who last week went on strike for a new building, that the board can take no action until a congressional survey of the District school system is completed next March.

"We will continue to work in the interests of students, survey or no survey," Mrs. Doyle said and praised Cantrell for directing the protest of Bell students into a "constructive channel."

Lee also criticized Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning for testifying before a congressional committee as late as May 21 that he planned to move Bell students into Central and then a few days later proposed that they be moved into Powell.

Corning said that school officers have restudied the question and found Powell better suited than Central for housing vocational students.

Other Board Action

In other actions yesterday the board:

Preferred charges for dismissal against Mrs. Edith P. Thomas, a teacher at the Carver Elementary School, as the result of a divorce granted her husband on charges that she committed adultery. This "is an offense against morality and good order, contrary to the by-laws, rules and regulations for the public schools," the charge said.

Mrs. Doyle said the board will sit in trial sometime after July 1. It will be the first such trial in more than 20 years.

Approved participation of elementary schools in a radio quiz sponsored by The Washington Post at 10:30 a. m. Saturdays over Station WTOP.

Plan Provides FringeParking Of 1350 Autos

Lots Would Open At 9:15 A. M. to Avoid All-Day Occupancy

A program for providing "fringe" parking for 1350 autos and shuttle bus service downtown for their drivers was pushed a step closer to reality yesterday by the Board of Zoning Adjustment.

It approved a Motor Vehicle Parking Agency plan to set up a temporary parking lot for 450 cars in Temple Heights at Connecticut ave. and Columbia rd. nw.

Only Public Utilities Commission approval of Capital Transit Co.'s shuttle bus plan now is needed to put the system in operation, P. Y. K. Howat, MVPA chairman, said.

Lots for 450 cars each have been tentatively arranged for at Temple Heights; Municipal Center Parking Lot, John Marshall pl. and C st. nw., and areas near Heurich Brewery at 26th and E sts. nw., Howat said.

Drivers could park at any of the three lots as long as they wished and obtain a shuttle bus ride downtown and back—all for 40 cents, he said.

The "fringe" lots would open at 9:15 a. m. so space would not be taken by workers seeking all-day parking, he revealed.

Buses would run at 10-minute intervals between 9:15 a. m. and 6:15 p. m. from both Temple Heights and Heurich lots to the Municipal Center area. Both routes would pass through the downtown F st. business district between 15th and 8th sts. nw.

The zoning group turned down, however, MVPA's request to set up a temporary parking lot along the shuttle bus route at 2017 F st. nw. Neighbors opposed the plan.

American Security and Trust Co. obtained the board's approval for building a bank at 2300 Calvert st. nw.

Owners of the Meridian Hill Hotel received permission to establish a ladies' lingerie, gift and dress shop in the hotel at 2601 16th st. nw.

Action was deferred by the zoning board, however, on the hotel's request to establish a drug stand.

Trinity Episcopal Church was given a green light by the board for constructing a two-story addition to its church at Piney Branch rd. and Dahlia st. nw.

Marvin Willig received permission to set up a temporary parking lot at 2601 15th st. nw., but the board denied Waverly E. Mayton's request for a temporary parking lot at 935 N st. nw.

2 More Blasts Send Manhole Covers in Air

Two more manhole covers blew off here yesterday in the wake of a series of blasts Tuesday that shut off electric power in three sections of Washington and caused damage estimated at more than $30,000.

The explosions yesterday were unrelated. A cover at 19th st. and Benning rd. ne. was thrown into the air by a minor explosion from a short circuit caused by wet weather, it was stated. A blast at New Jersey ave. and N st. se. was caused by an error of a cable splicer, officials said.

Meanwhile, workmen were repairing damage at the Potomac Electric power plant near 33d st. and Benning rd. ne. and along open lines. The work, which is planned for completion today, was delayed by wind and rain, according to James Ferry, executive vice president of Pepco.

The trouble when a 13,000-volt feeder running between the Benning plant and the Kearny st. substation failed because of a short circuit. The oil circuit breaker failed to open for undetermined reasons. The enormous flow of current caused, it was said, another line to short, and when the reactors in this line burned open, the action was accompanied by a spectacular series of explosions.

Cairns Appointed Industrial Home School Assistant

John F. Cairns, 33, was appointed assistant superintendent of Industrial Home School yesterday by the Commissioners.

Cairns

He succeeds Gerard Shea, who was advanced June 1 to the superintendent's post formerly held by Welfare Director John W. Tramburg.

Cairns, a former case worker in the Welfare Department's child welfare division, will received a salary of $4150. He has been employed by the Welfare Department since 1939, except for three years (1942-45) spent in the Army.

A graduate of Holy Cross University, he also holds a master's degree from Boston College. He and his wife, Mary, live at Potomac st. nw.

Suffrage Unit Keeps Finch As President

Wilbur S. Finch of the Carnegie Peace Endowment Foundation and past president of the Federation of Citizens Associations last night was reelected president of the District Central Suffrage Conference.

Other officers named were Guy A. Caponnetto, first vice president; Miss Sylvia Altman, second vice president; Mrs. Milton Dunn, third vice president; Mrs. Gertrude M. Evans, fourth vice president; Jesse B. Manbeck, secretary; Woolsey W. Hall, treasurer, and Mrs. Charlotte Sillers, historian.

Trustees reelected were Kenneth P. Armstrong, James A. Cobb, Karl Gerber, Charles S. Hill, Harry N. Stull, Harry S. Wender, Mrs. Marshall Hornblower, Austin Fickling, Dr. George W. Hodgkins, Mrs. Robert Leonard, Ulysses Banks, James S. Beattie and Mrs. Louis Ottenberg.

New trustees elected included Minor Hudson, John Picherins, John Connaughton, Benjamin Rathburn, Culver Chamberlin, Elmer E. Batzell, Leverett Meadows, Mrs. Frances Adams, Mrs. Monroe Briske, Mrs. John Thomas, Mrs. Harvey Wiley, Mrs. Gertrude Rodman, Mrs. C. D. Lowe and Mrs. Horace Phelps.

Candidate Hits Arlington County GOP Committee

Francis J. Clair, whose bid for GOP backing for Arlington County Board was nipped by the party's county executive committee, told the committee off yesterday.

Why, he said in a statement, "five families and their relatives" run the committe and the whole, 8000-member Arlington Republican party.

And what's more, he charged, these "five families" have divided up county Federal jobs if a Republican becomes President, even to picking a new postmaster and distirct attorney.

Clair, 4767 N 24th rd., a freelance writer, did not name the "five families."

He had claimed he filed formally for the GOP candidacy in the August 3 Republican primary. The GOP committee declared the primary hadn't been called to pick any county board candidate.

I. Lee Potter, Arlington businessman and Republican committee member, is seeking the post as an "independent."

Police Report Confession in Md. Slaying

Laborer Formally Charged With Murder In Officer's Death

Prince Georges County police said yesterday they had obtained a confession from one of two suspects in the slaying of Policeman Charles Caldwell.

The confession, police said, was obtained late Tuesday from Thomas Hall, 55-year-old laborer, who, with his daughter, Jane Hall, 20, has been formally charged with murder. The police declined to make public Hall's statement, however, and refused to say whether Hall had either implicated or absolved his daughter.

Hall previously had denied knowing who fired the shots last Saturday night that fatally wounded Caldwell and seriously injured Policeman Wallace Baker as the two policemen attempted to arrest Hall and his daughter after a house fight in Deanwood Park. Baker is recovering at Prince Georges General Hospital.

Police said they intended to check "all angles" of the confession against testimony of a number of other witnesses in an effort to get a clear picture of events leading up to the shooting. More than a dozen statements, some of them conflicting, have been obtained from persons who were present at the time or a few minutes before Caldwell was fatally wounded.

Meanwhile, members of the county police force were joined by more than 200 other policemen from Greater Washington at Caldwell's funeral, held in Fort Lincoln Cemetery Chapel. The last rites for the slain officer were conducted by the Rev. George Gingras of the St. Francis de Sales Church in Washington. Approximately 500 persons attended.

An escort of 30 motorcycle policemen from the District Metropolitan Police Department led the procession from Gasch's funeral home in Hyattsville to the cemetery chapel, where a uniformed honor guard of policemen from Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia towns and counties waited to pay Caldwell a final tribute. Burial was in the Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

After the funeral, it was announced that Prince Georges County Commissioners had ordered all official county flags to remain at half staff for a period of 15 days in tribute to the first Prince Georges policeman to be killed in action in 15 years.

It also was announced that the relief fund for Caldwell's family had grown to $2600. A number of benefits to aid the family have been scheduled, including a dance next Wednesday night at Prince Georges Country Club.

Real Estate Antitrust Suit Advance Refused

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough yesterday refused to advance the Justice Department's antitrust suit against the Washington Real Estate Board and the National Association of Real Estate Boards for trial in the District Court.

The suit asks that the defendants be enjoined from fixing commission fees and calls upon the court to declare this practice to be a violation of the antitrust laws. The case probably will not come before the courts until fall.

Rev. R. E. Lee New Head Of Silver Spring Group

The Rev. R. E. Lee of St. Luke United Lutheran Church, Silver Spring, has been named president of the newly organized Council of Silver Spring Churches. Other officers are O. O. Thomen, vice president; Bernard L. Roberts, treasurer, and Mrs. E. J. Schoen, secretary.

Audit Ordered

Business Tax Income Far Off Estimate

An audit of all fiscal 1948 unincorporated business tax returns has been ordered by Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent, it was revealed yesterday.

The year-old tax has yielded only half the one million dollars expected, Dent explained. Total "take" as of May 27, the last complete figure obtainable, was only $445,000, he said.

In many cases, Dent believes, owners of unincorporated businesses have incorrectly listed the entire net taxable amount as "salary" rather than "profit."

This enables them to save money by paying the District income tax of up to 3 per cent rather than the unincorporated business tax rate of 5 per cent, he said.

"A great number" of the 8385 returns filed so far may fall in this category, Dent revealed. "In a number of cases we're going to disallow the salary as excessive," he warned. "We expect to pick up a considerable amount of taxes through the audit."

Taxpayers have the right to appeal against the extra assessments to the District Board of Tax Appeals, Dent explained.

Man Found Dead In Glover Park Ruled Suicide

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald yesterday issued a certificate of suicide in the death of William C. Cunningham, 44, of 3842 Beecher st. nw., who was found with his throat and both wrists slashed in the Glover-Archbold Park woods near the 1900 block of 38th st. nw.

Mr. Cunningham's father, William C. Cunningham, sr., had reported his son missing to the police early yesterday. Police said he was suffering from a mental disorder and had threatened to take his life.

He was a veteran of World War II and had participated in several major naval battles in the Pacific.

1 Jail Term, 2 Fines Issued In Union Trial

Morgan Gets 4 to 18 Months; $2500 Levied On Moreschi, Weiner

Sentencing five men convicted in the District Court of looting the treasury of the AFL International Hod Carriers Union, Justice Alexander Holtzoff yesterday excoriated faithless union officials and condemned the practice of squandering union money in barrooms.

The men and their sentences were:

George Morgan, former financial secretary of the hod carriers' local, who personally got $900 of the missing funds and was an associate of the missing defendant, Larry Kelly, blamed for taking $50,000 from the union — 4 to 18 months in jail without probation.

Faust Moreschi, secretary-treasof the hod carriers District council—4 months to 1 year in jail and a fine of $2500, with probation granted on the jail sentence because Moreschi did not personally receive any of the misappropriated money.

Isaac Weiner, a Leonardtown, Md., businessman—4 months to 1 year in jail, also suspended and a fine of $2500.

Evans M. Hamilton, former local recording secretary—4 months to 1 year, suspended.

Joseph Speed, formal local business agent—4 months to 1 year, suspended.

Justice Holtzoff warned Weiner and Moreschi that they must pay up their fines by Friday afternoon or be committed to jail.

The justice said that if the missing Kelly, who is believed to have died at sea while serving on a merchant vessel in the war, should turn up he would be liable to a limit sentence of 8 months to 2 years in jail for criminal conspiracy.

Judges Start Today to Select Ideal Father

Contest judges for The Washington Post will begin a heart-warming task today as they try to select Greater Washington's Ideal Father from the dozens of nominees entered by fond children of all ages.

Sons and daughters of the area have been telling us for two weeks now—in both prose and poetry—how swell their respective dads are and why. Final entries, postmarked up to midnight last night, are expected today.

The winner will be announced by this weekend, in time for Father's Day on Sunday.

Gilmer Is Confirmed

The Senate yesterday confirmed the presidential nomination of Howard C. Gilmer, jr., as United States Attorney for the Western District of Virginia.

Fairlington Tenants Obtain Accord in Shrub-Destruction

Fairmac Corp. and its Fairlington tenants last night apparently reached accord over the management's shrub-destruction at the 3500-unit Virginia apartment development.

Following a meeting between the Fairlington Association's flower committee and Fairmac General Manager William Ziegler, Mrs. Edith Walters, chairman of the tenants' committee, announced a four-point agreement had been signed.

The agreement, she said, called for the management to refrain from further destruction of shrubs set out by the tenants, and that when bulb plants or perennials must be cut to permit sodding, the management must give the tenant advance notice and that such cutting will not be done more than three days before sodding.

The agreement also, she said, provided that all shrubs, set out in accord with an agreement with the management last March, and which were cut last Friday, be replaced by the management by July 1, if possible. Otherwise, they will be replaced in the fall.

Mrs. Walters asked tenants to inform her committee of all shrubs that have been destroyed.

1 in 20 Restaurants Found Serving Oleo

Washington diners can be fairly certain that restaurants here are serving them butter and not oleo, the United States Testing Co. Inc., of Hoboken, N. Y., said yesterday.

Only one in 20 restaurants visited here by bread-and-butter sleuths, making a secret test, served the cheaper product ostensibly for butter, the company reported.

Washington, said H. M. Block, company vice president, scored better than five other cities similarly tested. Only one of nine cities tested, Los Angeles, scored 100 per cent for nonsubstitution, he said.

The surveys, said Block, were made by representatives of Fact Finders, a scientific survey organization, who visited selected restaurants, ordered bread and butter, and slipped the "butter" into special coded containers. The samples were then analyzed by the United States Testing Co.

San Antonio, Tex., diners, the results showed, were the most deceived, with 18 out of 20 restaurants serving the butter substitute as a dairy spread, Block reported.

Robert J. Wilson, secretary of the Washington Association, termed results of the secret survey "gratifying," but added, "I'd like to know the name of the restaurant that failed."

The association, said Wilson, conducted a special educational campaign among members to stress that those serving oleo follow District Health Department requirements that notice of such substitution be prominently displayed at these restaurants.

New Post for Kaufman

Henry J. Kaufman, head of the Washington advertising firm which bears his name, has been elected a vice president of the Advertising Federation of America. The federation, currently meeting in Cincinnati, represents all phases of advertising — clubs, advertisers, agencies, other advertising organizations.

Mr. Kaufman, a native Washingtonian, is senior partner in Henry J. Kaufman & Associates. The advertising firm was founded by him in 1929. He is a past president of the Washington Advertising Club.

Tax Discussion Tonight

Persons interested in the new auto and business tax recently authorized for Arlington by the Virginia Legislature, and in Arlington's tax program in general, have been invited to a panel discussion sponsored by the Democratic Club of Arlington at 8:15 tonight at the Lyon Park Community House.

Panel members will be Mrs. Florence Cannon, Basil de Lashmutt and Alfred E. Frisbie of the Arlington County Board; H. B. Bloomer, editor of the Arlington Sun, and Alexandria City Councilman E. A. Hellmuth. Questions will be asked from the floor.

Adm. Manning a Trustee

The election of Rear Admiral John J. Manning, chief of the Navy's Bureau of Yards and Docks in Washington, as a trustee of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute at Troy, N. Y., announced yesterday by institute President Livingston W. Houston.

Admiral Manning was graduated from the institute in 1915 as a civil engineer. Last week he was elected president of the Rensselaer Alumni Association.

Golfers in the Rough

Arlington detectives would like to encounter the divot-minded thieves who early yesterday stole four gunny sacks full of golf balls from an Arlington driving range.

Proprietor "Brick" Wood told police the balls had been purloined from his driving range on Lee blvd., near the Fairfax County line, sometime between midnight and 8 a. m. yesterday. He said the balls were worth about $800.

Red Cross Canteen Report

A total of 21,788 servicemen and veterans have been served by District Red Cross canteen workers this year, according to Canteen Service Chairman Mrs. H. E. F. Hawkins. During that period, 303 volunteers spent 1727 hours in this service, she said.

Highway Survey Report

Greater Washington's highway transportation survey is 23 per cent complete, D. S. Brinkley, highway planning engineer, announced yesterday.

The survey, designed to determine travel habits of Greater Washington residents, will be used in developing highway plans for the area.

Interviewers are visiting one in every 20 area homes, stopping every every other auto on major roads leading into Washington, and questioning taxi and truck drivers.

Beer License Faces Test

George Washington took the rap yesterday for a troublesome beer parlor in Alexandria.

The occasion was a hearing before the Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board in Richmond to decide whether the beer license for Lyles' Billiard Parlor, 415 King st., should be revoked because loiterers whistled at passing women in front of the place.

Walter I. Young, attorney, representing the pool room owner, argued George Washington helped lay out King st. and, instead of running it due east-west, got off course 13 degrees. As a result, it's shadier and cooler, Young argued, and more conducive to loitering on Lyles' side of the street. The board promised a ruling in a few days.

$550 Microscope Stolen

Theft of a $550 microscope from the laboratory of Alexandria Hospital was reported to Alexandria police yesterday. Dr. Jefferson D. Kernodle, hospital pathologist, said the instrument was last seen in the unlocked laboratory Sunday evening. He offered a personal reward of $50 for the return of the microscope undamaged.

Trade Board Fetes Retiring Congressman

The Washington Post

TESTIMONIAL DINNER—Members of the Washington Board of Trade last night honored Representative Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.) (second from right) at the Mayflower Hotel. On hand to wish the retiring House District Committee chairman well were (from left) Commissioner John Russell Young, Frederick P. M. Siddons, vice president of the Board of Trade, and Joseph C. McGarraghy, chairman of the Greater National Capital Committee

Businessmen, civic leaders and fellow Congressmen last night paid tribute to Representative Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.), who is retiring as Chairman of the House District Affairs Committee.

The tribute was paid at a testimonial dinner at the Mayflower Hotel. It was sponsored by the Washington Board of Trade.

Frederick P. H. Siddons, first vice president of the board, presented Congressman Dirksen with a hand-painted scroll bearing the District and Board of Trade official seals, for "his sponsorship of wise legislation that will give direction to Washington as a community for many years to come."

John Russell Young, president of the District's Board of Commissioners, said of Dirksen that "in all my 40 years in public experience, I've never before met a finer man—a finer gentleman."

Principal speaker was Benjamin M. McKelway, editor of The Evening Star, who praised the Congressman for serving the District people as "faithfully as he has the people of the Illinois Sixteenth Congressional District who sent him to Congress more than 15 years ago."

In response to the praise from his colleagues and "constituents," Dirksen solemnly replied that "I am deeply grateful. Gratitude will be indelibly engraved in my mind, heart and soul."

In conclusion, Dirksen remarked that "there was danger I'd go blind. I have retrieved full sight in my right eye," he said. "It won't be long when vision in the left eye is restored and God willing, I shall be back in Washington."

Taxi Driver Killed Colliding With Police Car; Boy, 7, Injured

A District cab driver was dead yesterday and a 7-year-old Villa Heights, Md., boy was unconscious in a hospital as the result of two highway accidents.

Dead was Stuart J. Gay, 34, cab driver, of 141 Bates st. nw.

The boy, Lucious Stone, of 4801 56th ave., Villa Heights, was in poor condition at Prince Georges General Hospital, Cheverly.

Gay was killed at 12:20 a. m. yesterday on the Baltimore blvd., near Muirkirk, Md., when he ran into the side of a car driven by Corpl. Roland Sweitzer, 28, of the Prince Georges County police.

Only a few hours earlier Sweitzer had taken part in the investigation of an accident in which Marion Jarboe, jr., 3, was fatally injured by a car in front of his home at 3107 Lancer dr., Queens Chapel Manor, Hyattsville, Md.

Prince Georges County police said Gay ran across the boulevard and into the side of the corporal's car. Gay was rushed to Leland Memorial Hospital, Riverdale, but was pronounced dead on arrival.

A native of Charlottesville, Va., and a Merchant Marine veteran of World War II, Gay had lived in Washington for 11 years. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Trosy Gay, and three daughters, Frances, 14; Sylvia, 12, and Jacqueline, 5.

The Stone boy, a student at the Bladensburg elementary school, was struck by a car shortly before 4 p. m. on Defense hwy. near the school. At Prince Georges General Hospital, where his condition was described as poor, it was said he may have suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries.

Police said the car was driven by Earl F. Livingston, of 5037 55th ave., Villa Heights. The accident was witnessed by Prince Georges Police Lieut. Louis Mackall who said the boy suddenly darted from the sidewalk directly into the path of the car.

Clothesline Traps Alleged Car Thief

A backyard clothesline was yesterday credited with roping an alleged car thief who was fleeing the hands of the law.

The suspect, a 16-year-old youth, struck the taut line in flight, and was literally bounced back into the hands of Police Pvt. W. B. Stevens.

The almost tall tale began at 3:25 a. m. when Comdr. Orville A. Olstad awoke in his second-floor bedroom at 2805 31st st. se. to the sound of his own automobile. He looked out to see someone driving off in his 3-month-old 1948 Mercury coupe.

Olstad called police, but quickly. Two scout cars converged on the scene; one spotted the car but was quickly outdistanced. A short time later, Stevens and Pvt. P. W. Legg, in the second scout car, found the Mercury parked, its motor running, in the 3100 block of Buena Vista ter, se. Policeman Stevens hid himself in the coupe and awaited developments.

It wasn't long, Stevens said, before the youth approached the car, but saw the officer and took to his heels across the yards. Stevens said he was catching up after a five block chase when the clothesline came to his aid.

Said Commander Olstad's wife: "The police certainly acted quickly. It's a good thing, too. We waited two years for that car, and only had it three months. Why, Orville practically slept with one ear on that car."

The captured youth, an escapee from the District Receiving Home, was held for action of the juvenile authorities.

Father O'Brien Given Farewell By Parishioners

A farewell reception was held last night in St. Anthony's Hall in honor of the Rev. Edward J. O'Brien, assistant pastor of the parish for the last five years, who was recently named pastor of the newly established parish of the Little Flower at Glen Echo, Md.

The Rev. John J. Coady, pastor of St. Anthony's, joined 500 parishioners in congratulating Father O'Brien upon his appointment and expressing regret at the loss of his services. As a farewell token, the 42-year-old priest was given a purse by the parishioners.

Dr. Anthony J. Scullen of Catholic University was master of ceremonies which included greetings by the Sodality, the Holy Name Society, the Youth Club and the Sodality Choir. The Antonian Glee Club sang.

Major General's Pay Voted Leslie Groves

House approval sent to the White House yesterday a bill to grant Lieut. Gen. Leslie R. Groves the retirement pay of a major general.

The bill also would allow Groves, wartime head of the Army's Manhattan District which developed the atomic bomb, to be carried on the retirement list as a lieutenant general. He retired in February at his permanent rank of brigadier general.

D.C. Policeman Burned Using Cleaning Fluid

A flash fire in the basement of his home yesterday put a District policeman in Arlington Hospital with second and third degree burns. His condition was said to be serious.

Pitts

The policeman, Pvt. Mahlon Pitts, 28, was using a cleaning solvent to remove asphalt tile from the basement of his home at 1014 N. Madison st., Arlington, shortly after noon yesterday.

Without warning, fumes from the cleaning fluid were ignited by the pilot light of a nearby hot-water heater. Flames enveloped Pitts and even blistered walls in the kitchen above.

Pitts' wife, Mrs. Beulah Pitts, said she felt the air impact of the flash fire as she worked upstairs. She rushed her husband to the hospital in the family car for emergency treatment.

Firemen from three Arlington companies found the brief flames had completely subsided when they arrived, and said the house was only slightly damaged.

Pitts, a scout car policeman in the Third Precinct, is suffering from third degree burns of both arms and legs, and second degree burns of the neck and face.

Col. Cole Heads Third Infantry And Fort Myer

Col. James V. Cole has been named commanding officer of Fort Myer and of the Third Infantry Regiment which is stationed there, it was announced yesterday by Military District of Washington headquarters.

During World War II Colonel Cole saw service with the Island Commands of Guadalcanal and New Caledonia and for two years was assistant chief of staff for personnel of the First Army Corps in Japan.

A Native of Lisbon, N. D., he was graduated from West Point in 1918. He is married and has two sons, James G. Cole, 23, and Andrew Cole, 16.

Suit Filed Here For Possession Of Hesse Jewels

Prince Wolfgang of Hesse and Margarethe, Landgrafin of Hesse, filed suit in the District Court yesterday against Secretary of Defense James Forrestal and Secretary of Army Kenneth Royall to obtain possession of $1,500,000 worth of the Hesse crown jewels that they propose to send back to the American zone of Germany.

The suit was filed by Attorney Joseph S. Robinson of New York, who prosecuted three American officers for stealing the jewels from Kronberg Castle, Germany, in November, 1945. Robinson claimed that it would be dangerous at this time to send the jewels back to Germany.

Man Held in Boston For Alexandria Holdup

A 36-year-old man has been arrested in Boston in the March 1 holdup robbery of $588 from the Union Life Insurance Co. in Alexandria, police said yesterday.

Alexandria police said FBI agents in Boston had arrested a man identified as Loren E. Shank on Monday on a charge of illegally wearing a Navy uniform.

Shanks was identified on the day the robbery occurred by employes of the insurance company, 815 King st., police said, by a photograph received from Cleveland, where he was wanted on another charge.

In Memoriam

STONER, ELLA HELEN—In loving memory of my beloved, only sister, who died from injuries two years ago.

Often, my darling, my tears will flow,
Dimming your picture before my eyes.
Not here the one in my heart that lies,
The stars seem dim as I whisper low,
My own sweet sister, I miss you so.

No one knows how I miss you,
No one knows the pain,
Since we lost you
Life has never been the same.

God grant all careless drivers,
With no regards for law or man,
Will answer for the suffering of loved ones,
Now in God's promised land.

SISTER MAE.

New Iron Lung Gives Body Complete Rest

By Howard W. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Editor

New York, June 16.—The most complete rest ever known, inside a new kind of iron lung, is a recent treatment for tuberculosis shown at the National Tuberculosis Association annual meeting here today.

In this lung machine a person's lungs do not move at all. Rest for the lungs as complete as possible, always has been one of the important steps in recovering from tuberculosis.

The lung machine is a long, rounded steel tube, big enough for a man. A person can enter and leave at will. Inside, he can talk, read and breathe normally, if he wishes.

But by pressing a button, he can stop all movement of lungs and breathing muscles. Compressed air begins to flow by its own force into the lung tissues. But it does not expand them, because simultaneously, the occupant's chest is pressed from the outside by air at exactly the same pressure. The occupant doesn't feel the compressed air, but it takes a few days to learn not to try to breathe.

Twenty of these new lung machines are now in use in nine American cities. New York doctors have treated 22 patients, all bad cases with cavities in the lungs, after other treatments failed. Fourteen got well enough to return to work. A fifteenth expects to return to work soon. The cavities are closed.

The lung rest is for about 10 hours daily, and for four to six months.

New Brain Operation Found Pain Reliever

Atlantic City, June 16 (AP). — A new brain operation that relieves pain in any part of the body was reported today at the annual meeting of the American Neurological Association.

The operation was described by Dr. John E. Scarff of Columbia University. It was perfected six months ago.

One of the front parts of the brain (a prefrontal lobe) is disconnected from the rest of the brain. This merely severs the nerve connections to the rest of the brain, and the lobe remains otherwise unharmed.

The new operation makes no personality change, and has no effect on intelligence.

Assistant Chief

Martin Gets No. 2 Spot at Children's

Appointment of John D. Martin of Muncie, Ind., as assistant director of Children's Hospital here was announced yesterday by Dr. Montgomery Blair, hospital director, effective July 1.

Martin will fill the vacancy created in May when Assistant Director John J. Anderson left Children's Hospital to become administrator at Arlington Hospital, Arlington, Va.

Martin, 32, is the son of an Episcopal clergyman, the Rev. John G. Martin, superintendent of St. Barnbas Hospital, Newark, N. J., for the past 25 years. He was graduated from Yale University in 1937. Now a major in Field Artillery, Army Reserves, he spent five years in the European and south Pacific theaters.

Martin took a course in hospital administration at Columbia University, graduating late in 1946 with a degree of master of science. Since then he has served as assistant to the medical director (an internship) at the Medical Center, Jersey City, N. J., and for the past year as assistant superintendent at Ball Memorial Hospital, Muncie, Ind.

He is married and has two children.

Blame for Wreck Of B & O Train Laid to Work Gang

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad has completed its investigation of last Thursday's train wreck at Laurel, Md., and has sent its report to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

While company officials declined to make public their findings, it was learned that the report places the blame for the derailment of four cars of its crack train, the Diplomat, on a section gang working on the track at the time.

The accident resulted in the death of a dining car waiter and injuries to more than 50 persons.

Shirley N. Mills, director of safety for the ICC, which is also conducting an investigation, said his department's field work has been completed on the accident. This survey and the railroad's will be studied and a report drafted, he explained.

Man Found Dead, Head Submerged In Bathtub

Charles W. Green, 77, of 1416 C st. se., was found dead in his bathroom yesterday, his body bowed over and head submerged in an overflowing bathtub, Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, investigating, said Green may have suffered a heart attack.

The dead man was found at 9:30 a. m. by his son, Clifford, who returned home to find water running out the front door. He followed it up the stairs to the bathroom, and his father. Police said one spigot was turned on full but the stopper was not in the tub. The victim may have struck the spigot in falling, police said.

FRIENDS' COMMENCEMENT—Winners of the Sidwell Friends School are Mitchell Mills of 2629 Woodley pl. nw., and Mary Phipps Putnam of 3200 Highland pl. nw. They graduated from the school last night

Abolition of war is the central problem facing the world today, E. Raymond Wilson, executive secretary of the Friends Committee on Legislation, asserted last night at commencement exercises for 42 graduates of Sidwell Friends School.

He called upon the graduates for "lifelong enlistment in some sector of the complex and challenging effort to supplant war with law, anarchy with government, fear with faith, and force with reason.

Wilson declared there is a "compelling need" for revisions in the United Nations' charter to permit "change an development." The United Nations, he said, has "little prestige or authority" as it is now.

"I appeal to you," he told the graduates, "to be effective citizens of tomorrow. I invite you to live in that world of tomorrow today."

The candidates for graduation were presented by Howard W. Bartram, principal of the upper school. Diplomas were awarded by James Austin Stone, president of the board of trustees. The exercises, attended by more than 500 persons, were held in the school gymnasium, 3901 Wisconsin ave. nw.

95 Are Graduated At Columbus University

Commencement exercises for 95 graduates of Columbus University were held last night at the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, Connecticut ave. and H st. nw.

Invocation was delivered by the Rev. E. Robert Arthur, of St. Matthew's Church. George E. Herring, chairman of the board of trustees, conferred the degrees.

Commencement address was given by Daniel B. Maher, special assistant Corporation Counsel. Law and Accountancy School graduates were presented by Deans James J. Hayden and Daniel J. Ryan, of the representative schools.

Harold F. Jones, vice president of the University, awarded scholastic prizes. William E. Leahy, university president, presided.

Post members also nominated without opposition Philip Stearns as first vice president; Ralph Parkus as second vice president and John F. O'Meara as third vice president.

Principal Says Mrs. Lewis' Talk Wasn't Untoward

The principal of Montgomery Blair High School said yesterday Mrs. Aleksandra Lewis' talk to Montgomery Blair students was before—not after—her controversial talk at Western High School in Washington.

Attorney Franklin T. Miles, 15 Virginia st., Chevy Chase, told Montgomery County commissioners Tuesday Mrs. Lewis spoke at the school May 26, 1947. Her talk on May 6 of that year at Western High had raised a ruckus when four students walked out, claiming her talk was pro-Communist.

Montgomery Blair Principal Daryl Shaw said Mrs. Lewis spoke March 26—not May 26—and that he had sat in on her talk and she said "nothing out of line."

County Commissioner Wesley I. Sauter, meanwhile, said he intends to call for "a full investigation" of Miles' charges. The attorney also charged Montgomery schools were using pro-Communist books.

8th Body Found in Vanport

Portland, Oreg., June 16 (AP).—The Vanport flood waters yielded the body of their eighth known victim today, as the Columbia River dropped another half-foot.

He was Allen R. Hart, 32, an electrician who was working on the Vanport dike when that city was destroyed on Memorial Day. The known death toll is 45. There are 29 reported missing from Vanport.

Several Portland streets and industries emerged from the water for the first time in two weeks today. But the Columbia River, still 14 feet above flood stage at Vancouver, Wash., continued rolling through thousands of homes, industries, and farms.

Matthias—Powell

Miss Elizabeth Anne Powell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond H. Powell of Washington, and Robert Henry Matthias, son of Mrs. William Matthias of South Royalton, Vermont, and the late Mr. Matthias, were married at the Little Sanctuary of St. Albans School for Boys at 4:30 p. m. yesterday. Canon Albert H. Lucas of the National Cathedral officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown with white lace bodice and marquisette skirt. Her veil of illusion was held by a hand-tatted lace cap and she carried an old-fashioned bouquet.

Mrs. Ruby A. Schultz, the bride's sister, was her matron of honor. William Matthias served his brother as best man and Ruby A. Schultz and Peter Paul Rice were ushers.

After the reception, the couple left for a motor trip. On their return they will reside in Providence, R. I.

The bride was graduated from the Sidwell Friends School in Washington, the Earlham College in Richmond, Ind., and received her master's degree from Smith College. Her husband, who served in the Naval Air Corps during the war, graduated from Amherst College in Massachusetts and is now doing graduate work at Brown University in Providence, R. I.

Ferguson—Garrity

White flowers decorated the Shrine of the Sacred Heart yesterday for the wedding of Miss Martha Clare Garrity and Francis Joseph Ferguson, jr. Mrs. Ferguson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Francis Garrity of Washington, and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Joseph Ferguson of Trenton, N. J. The Rev. James A. Smyth officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of ivory satin and a veil of illusion with panel of antique lace. Her flowers were white orchids and stephanotis.

Miss Geraldine Garrity, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Other attendants were Miss Helen Dunigan, Miss Jane Ferguson, sister of the bridegroom, Miss Sheila Ryan of Boston, Mrs. Howard Kerns and Miss Mary Margaret Murphy.

Joseph Sullivan of Washington was best man, and the ushers were John Allison of Boston. Howard Kerns, Albert Luckey, jr., Edward Moynihan of Boston, John Whelan and Robert Whelan of Washington's Crossing, N. J.

A reception was held at Columbia Country Club.

The bride was educated at the Convent of the Sacred Heart, this city, and served as nurse's aid during the war, with duty at Walter Reed and Emergency Hospitals. The bridegroom was graduated from Georgetown School of Foreign Service and is now attending Georgetown Law School. During the war, he served three years with the Army in the South Pacific.

Brawner—Merwin

Miss Evelyn Jane Mervin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Chester Merwin, became the bride yesterday of Edgar Newlon Brawner, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Newlon Brawner of Kenwood, Md. The ceremony took place at 4:30 p. m. in All Saints' Church, Chevy Chase, the Rev. Charles W. Lowry officiating.

Given in marrige by her father, the bride wore a gown of antique satin and lace with a veil of illusion which was held with clusters of orange blossoms. Her flowers were lilies of the valley and white orchids.

Miss Lois Elizabeth Clouser was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Jane R. Bacon, Miss Patricia Tully, Mrs. Wesley H. Schmidt and Mrs. John B. Townsend.

Mr. Brawner served as best man for his son, and the ushers were David Brawner, brother of the bridegroom; John Marwin, brother of the bride; William McClure, John Sager and Dr. Crandall Alford.

The bride attended Mount Vernon Seminary and was graduated from George Washington University, class of '48. The bridegroom attended Princeton and George Washington Universities. He is now attending George Washington University Medical School.

After an extensive wedding trip, the couple will make their home in Washington.

Steinberger—Saks

Miss Margery Saks and Hugh Steinberger were married in the Mayflower Hotel June 15, the Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome M. Saks of Washington and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Marion Steinberger of Baltimore.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white lace with a long train and Juliet cap. Mrs. William Bell, sister of the groom, was matron of honor and Miss Jean Schlesinger was maid of honor.

James Goldsmith was best man and William Bell, Emanuel Hecht, Robert Fisher and Eugene Feinblatt were ushers.

After the reception at the Mayflower Hotel, the couple left for a Connecticut wedding trip. On their return they will reside in Washington.

Marshall—Manning

Miss Anne Jane Manning, daughter of Mrs. J. Thomas Manning and the late Mr. Manning of Arlington, Va., was married to Andrew Robert Marshall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Marshall, also of Arlington, at a nuptial mass yesterday at St. Charles' Church in Arlington. The Rev. K. M. Rizer officiated.

John T. Manning gave his sister in marriage. She wore white satin trimmed with bows of tulle appliqued in the skirt and train. Her veil of illusion fell from a crown of seed pearls and orange blossoms and she carried white iris, carnations and gypsophila.

Miss Marie Frazier was maid of honor and Mrs. Evelyn Hyett, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Patricia Hollingsworth were bridesmaids. James Rhodes was best man and William Hyett, Ernest Smalling, George Brown and Lloyd Brawner were ushers. Annette Smalling was flower girl.

Debut Parties Given

Misses Mulligan and Barry Are Presented

WHITE FLOWERS filled the Sulgrave Club yesterday for the tea dance debut of Miss Patricia Mulligan. Dressed in full-skirted white nylon with a deep border of embroidered organdy, the bud was presented by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Coolidge Mulligan. Mrs. Mulligan wore a black lace gown over pink chiffon.

The debutante is in the graduating class at St. Timothy's, and is a Potomac School girl, class of 1945. She will also be presented at a dance during the Christmas holidays. Miss Mulligan is the granddaughter of the late Judge Henry Coolidge Mulligan of Boston, Mass., and the late John Fisher Maxwell of Amsterdam, N. Y.

Those who presided at the tea tables yesterday include Mrs. David S. Barry, Mrs. Samuel F. Beach, Mrs. William McKee Dunn, Mr. C. Ashmead Fuller, Mrs. James Gilman, Mrs. Samuel H. Kauffmann, Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, Mrs. Minot Coolidge Mulligan, Mrs. A. Chambers Oliphant, Mrs. Paul E. Shorb, Mrs. Berkeley L. Simmons, Mrs. William North Sturtevant, Mrs. Richard B. Wigglesworth, all of Washington, and Mrs. John Hamilton Christian of Huntington, W. Va.

JUNE DEBUTANTES went from Miss Patricia Mulligan's tea dance yesterday at the Sulgrave Club, to Col. and Mrs. David S. Barry's dance at the Chevy Chase Club at which their daughter, Miss Barbara Barry was presented to society.

In between the two parties, Miss Mulligan's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Coolidge Mulligan entertained at dinner for Miss Barry, who was graduated with their daughter from St. Timothy's School this spring.

Miss Barry stood with her parents to welcome the guests at the dance wearing a charming frock of pale blue marquisette, with strapless bodice and a bouffant skirt fashioned of two tiers. She carried an old fashioned bouquet of blue delphinium circling a cluster of gardenias. Meyer Davis came down from New York to lead his orchestra for the dance.

The guests were, for the most part, this season's debutantes with a few young married friends of Colonel and Mrs. Barry's two married daughters. Colonel and Mrs. Barry entertained at the Chevy Chase Club for their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. B. Gordon Dickey, while the Barrys themselves dined with Dr. and Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin. Others having dinner parties were Representative and Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bradley, and Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken.

A houseparty at the Barry house here for the dance includes Miss Kate Ireland of Cleveland; Miss Ruth Delafield of Hewlitt Long Island; Miss Josephine Dexter of Philadelphia, and Miss Virginia Lee Caswell of Havana, all schoolmates of the debutante at St. Timothy's. Also John C. Chester of Milwaukee; Walter Schwab of Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island; Randolph Barber and William Spencer of Chicago.

Today, out-of-town debutantes from St. Timothy's, who came over for the two coming-out parties, will be feted at a luncheon at the Sulgrave by Mrs. C. Ashmead Fuller.

Mrs. Lodge's Day

Hardworking Francesca, With Many Irons in Fire, Sets Congressional Pace

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

DARIEN, CONN., June 16.—Recently a picture magazine subjected Ohio's Congressman John Vorys' busy day to a blow-by-blow, hour-by-hour expose. At day's end our hero looked rumpled, haggard. This department wasn't a bit impressed. We know a score of Congressmen's wives who work ten times as hard, come up evenings looking as though they had just spent 50 smackers at Elizabeth Arden's. Since we've been pausing briefly on our more or less ancestral Connecticut acres, it was easy to prove this point by asking the local Congressman's wife to dinner. Our Congressman happens to be John Davis Lodge.

Francesca Braggiotti Lodge arrived in a station wagon packed with two daughters, one small female guest and a dog. Mrs. L. had in hand a copy of the current Look magazine containing an article she authored on Italy's First Lady. Though the evening was warm, her feet were encased in fur bedroom slippers. "I was so busy I didn't notice," she laughed.

This was a handy opener. Scratching the surface of Francesca's domestic doings, we discovered she had motored from Washington to open her Westport house before leaving for Philadelphia and the Republican Convention. The trip was made at snail's pace because the Lodge canaries, proud parents of two eggs, were passengers, too. Somewhere near Baltimore the chicks hatched. To avoid bumps and jars speed was reduced to a crawl.

Once in Westport, Francesca started on a cleaning, sewing, health orgy. Besides cooking three meals daily for five people (both daughters have a guest), she's redecorating a room, repairing the driveway, having dogs and pony clipped, carting laundry and cleaning, fixing barn and paddock, and putting away winter and taking out summer clothes for daughters and husband. In between she takes all telephone calls for her husband, dozens for herself, and since she received anywhere from 15 to 20 personal letters a day to stick to her desk between 9 a. m. and 1 p. m. In between, she's continuing radio talks to Italy in Italian over WRUL. Her current effort is a series of 48, describing each State with appropriate Senator as guest artist.

Dancing the GOP Glide

SINCE everyone in Connecticut is mad to hear about La Vie in Washington, the Congressman's wife has accepted half a dozen speaking engagements. The Republican Glide, a dance she sponsored at the Republican ball in the Capital adds to her problems. Now she is inundated with requests to teach it in local clubs. Once head of her own dance studio on Wilton rd., Francesca turned over her students to George Volodin on leaving for Washington. But now she collaborates with him, drops in for an hour or so afternoons.

Mrs. Lodge is in great demand as a dancer. On June 27 she is appearing at a United Nations Children's benefit in New Haven, and on June 30 at Darien's Wee Burn Club. Since there is no time for rehearsal, Francesca is doing a Mexican hat dance. She can perform in any space or place and she has phonograph records she bought in Mexico.

In other years both Francesca and her daughter, Lily, now a Wellesley freshman, have been in Westport Theater shows. This summer New York Theater Guild's Lawrence Langer, who runs things theatrical in Westport, asked her to "take the part of a Spartan woman who does a few exercises" in Lysistrata, which is opening June 28 with June Havoc in the role Miriam Hopkins made famous.

Instead, Mrs. Lodge is heading the subscription committee, has assembled committees in 20 communities. Last Friday at a luncheon of a hundred plus at the Longshore Club she got up a celebrity table, had Teresa Helburn, John C. Wilson, Billy Gaxton, Steve Dohanos, who does those elegant Saturday Evening Post covers, plus Michael Strange as guest speakers.

As if this wasn't sufficiently exhausting, Francesca is also head of the children's section of Westport's Yankee Doodle Fair. The YD fair, pictured in Life last year, hauls in over $20,000, takes care of the local milk fund, dentistry for underpriviledged children, tuberculosis patients' free X-rays, orphan care, visiting nurses and heaven knows what good works. The Lodge pony, Beauty, bought during the gas rationing era, is one of the big money makers.

Pet Projects

AS A CONGRESSMAN'S wife, Mrs. Lodge has many charity demands. Since she is warm hearted, gives away too much of her husband's hard earned salary, Francesca has set up her own charity fund out of her personal earnings in writing and dancing. A yesterday request, for instance, came from a widow suffering from tuberculosis and mother of three children. One about to graduate from school had no pretty dress. So Francesca telegraphed asking size, favorite color and by afternoon dispatched a size 16 blue dress.

A pet project is a talented young singer named Flora Matteola. Poor, the girl must help support her family and Francesca is trying to interest the community in financing her career. Among her mail are many requests for personal letters congratulating constituents on their birthdays. Another curious demand on Mrs. Lodge's time is dozens of inquiries about her long blond hair.

Some time ago a magazine showed Francesca's hair and how she does it up in three swift motions. People write in to ask if it is really real, how often she washes it, could she send them a souvenir lock, and during the war she had many requests for individual hairs for precision instrument use. Last night we personally measured Francesca's hair. It reached 44 inches from crown to tip and is thick as thick.

Any odd minutes left are employed screening telephone calls for Congressman Lodge. Most asked question is who is to be next President. Bored with repetition, Francesca now answers she knows but it is a big secret. Then after a few minutes warmup discloses the secret—it is to be a woman. The Lodge telephone calls mount up more than do most Congressmen's since he sends a monthly Washington letter to over 2000 constituents—most of whom eventually call up Francesca, ask her opinion on this and that.

Finally we asked our Congressman's wife what she did about her own clothes, whether she had gone in for the New Look. "I haven't time for myself," she giggled, "I just let down everything I own. You might say I go in for the new look in old clothes." We glanced up from the fur bedroom slippers and Mrs. Lodge looked exceedingly attractive to us. Now Mr. Vorys, have you had a nervous breakdown?

Lieut. Portman and Miss Smith Wed

Miss Susan Anne Smith, daughter of Gen. Edward W. Smith, retired, and Mrs. Smith of Washington, was married to Lieut. Oscar William Portman, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Portman of Fort Worth, Tex., June 4, at St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, the Rev. Malcolm Marshall officiating.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in white taffeta and wore a fingertip veil. She carried starlight roses. Mrs. Charles W. Ryder, jr., was matron of honor and Miss Anne Plowman and Mrs. Robert Crowder were bridesmaids. Lieut. Glenn Brunsen was best man and the ushers were Lieut. Frank Smith and Lieut. James Daeger.

Colonel May Heads Women Of Air Forces

Col. Geraldine P. May took the oath of office as the first director of the Women in the Air Force at 3:30 p. m. yesterday in the office of the Secretary of the Air Force W. Stuart Symington in the Pentagon. Those present at the installation included Secretary of Defense James V. Forrestal, Secretary of Air Force Symington, Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall, members of Congress and high-ranking Air Force officers.

Colonel May will head the women's division of the Air Force, designated as the WAFS, created under the Women's Armed Services Integration Act of 1948, passed by Congress June 3, and signed by President Truman on June 12.

The WAFS will start recruiting on September 1. Colonel May said that until the Air Force decides on designs for its new uniforms, the WAFS will continue to wear WAC uniforms.

The Air Force said that approximately 100 WAF enlistments will be accepted by the WAFS every month until the authorized strength is reached. There are 2106 WAFS at present, with 173 officers and 12 warrant officers.

Colonel May graduated with the first WAAC class at Fort Des Moines, Iowa in 1942, and has been on duty with the Air Force for six years. During the war she served as WAC staff director for the Air Transport Command which had under its jurisdiction 6000 WAC enlisted personnel and officers.

Born in Albany, N. Y., Colonel May attended the Baldwin School in Bryn Mawr, Pa., and the University of California in Berkeley. She did social work in San Francisco and was Campfire Girl executive in Sacramento, Cal.

One of the first 18 WAC officers to be assigned to the Air Force, she was appointed WAC Staff Director for the Air Transport Command in March, 1943. Transferred to the Army Headquarters in January 1948, Colonel May was assigned to the office of Executive for Reserves and ROTC affairs to formulate a program for WACS in the reserve.

The new director of the WAFS has been awarded the Legion of Merit and the Army Commendation Ribbon.

JCRS Installs Mrs. Bernstein As President

Approximately 400 persons turned out yesterday to see Mrs. Joseph Bernstein take the oath of office as president of the Jewish Consumptive Relief Society at the installation luncheon at the Shoreham Hotel.

Others who took office were Mrs. Sylvan Steiner, first vice president; Mrs. Jules Gilbert, second vice president; Mrs. Charles Lenhoff, third vice president; Mrs. Morris Benson, fourth vice president; Mrs. Jacob Feldman, fifth vice president; Mrs. Newman Root, treasurer; Mrs. Milton Summers, financial secretary; Mrs. Albert Briskman, assistant financial secretary; Mrs. Harry Bramon, assistant financial secretary; Mrs. Charles Levinson, administration secretary; Mrs. Nat Summers, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Samuel Dick, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Stanley Lavine, recording secretary, and Mrs. Melvin Siegel, assistant recording secretary.

Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld installed the newly elected officers. The luncheon, which was under the chairmanship of Mrs. Charles Lenhoff, included vocal solos by Jerry Carter and Kay DeWitt. Senator Edwin C. Johnson, who was to be guest of honor, was unable to attend because of pressing duties at the Capitol.

AAUW Speaker Advocates Plan To Teach Germans Democracy

By Genevieve Reynolds

Dr. Mabel Newcomer, professor of economics at Vassar College, last night advocated bringing more German students to the United States so that they can study democracy firsthand.

The distinguished educator, who represented the United States on the four-power Committee on Taxation of Germany last year, made her suggestion in a talk before 47 branch presidents plus several board members of the American Association of University Women, gathered here for a four-day State presidents conference.

"One of the most difficult problems is educating the Germans in democracy," she explained. "We can't force democracy on any people but we can teach them by example. This can be done by sending the right people to Germany who will set the example.

"We should also send more American students to work with the German youth," she continued. "Of course, the colleges aren't operating but they could help teach democracy by working side by side with the Germans in the various camps."

Dr. Newcomer said that it wasn't a question of whether or not the German students are the most deserving but a question of that country being "the most strategic in Europe." "We can reach the Germans to educate them but not Russians," she declared. "We can't do anything about the Russian education. We can't change them, but we have to work to deal with them and I think it can be done."

Food Comes First

She pointed out that the first task of the Americans is to feed the Germans so that they can work, also, so we can build a little good will. "The people spend more time scrounging around for food than they do laboring," she asserted.

Other participants on the panel discussion featuring national and international affairs were Judge Dorothy Kenyon, AAUW's second vict president, who is the United States representative on the United Nations Commission on the Status of Women; Dr. Louise Pearce of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research, who discovered the cure for sleeping sickness; Dr. Constance Warren, president emeritus of Sarah Lawrence College and author of "A New Design for Women's Education," and Dr. Anna Powell of North Texas State Teachers College.

Judge Kenyon outlined the work of the U.N. Commission on the Status of Women and pronounced the commission's work successful. "We are finding areas of agreement," she declared, "and so are all the other bodies of U.N."

Dr. Warren called upon the branch presidents to help circularize an AAUW questionnaire in order to ascertain an evaluation of college training. She said that the poll of over 100,000 college trained women would be the first of its kind in history, and could serve as a possible guide for the study of educational trends.

The speaker also called upon college trained women "to become more intelligent alumnae, if you're the kind of alumnae who wants to keep the college as is throughout the years, then you're a menace," she said.

Urges Women To Form Lobby

The 1100 Maryland women attending the University of Maryland's rural short course were urged to organize lobbies in the State and national capitals.

Mrs. Hugh Butler described the work of lobbyists in the Nation's capital and said:

"We women had better be there, too. We must raise our voices and make our influence felt if we expect to get the kind of world we want for our children and grandchildren."

The rural women—along with a few from the cities—are engaged in a week-long series of classes on home economics. Between them they attend lectures and seminars on world and national affairs.

Yesterday they heard Roscoe Drummond, Washington correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor, observe that the danger of war is receding but that the tension between Russia and the United States is likely to continue.

The Christian Science Monitor specialist pegged his analysis on three general observations:

1. The danger of war in the world is receding. The more frankly and firmly we face the danger of war the less likely we are to have it. The peoples have begun to understand what communism is, what it stands for and how its operates.

2. The relationship between the Soviet Union and the "free world" is a state of "nonwar and nonpeace" and it is likely to stay that way for some time.

3. It is not yet clear whether we in this country must suffer because we are embroiled in a presidential election campaign this year.

"For six months," Mr. Drummond said, "the Kremlin has made clear its hope that the presidential election would keep this country so preoccupied that its foreign policy would be frustrated or seriously impaired for at least nine months . . . The events of the past 10 days indicate Russia may have been right."

Drummond cited as such indications the division of opinion which arose over the Marshall Plan and the congressional moves to "dismantle the reciprocal trade agreements."

"My Post ad found plenty of summer sublet apartments," reports Mr. HOOPER

Washingtonians are leaving town for the summer—and while they're away many of them would like to turn their apartments or homes over to reliable tenants. It's a first-rate opportunity to solve your housing problem, at least temporarily. Reach those people right now, as Mr. James Hooper did, through a Washington Post want ad. When he and another businessman advertised for a 2 or 3 room apartment to sublet for the summer months, he got "about six calls a day" and an excellent choice of homes and apartments. "Fine results," reports Mr. Hooper.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man Frays Nerves of Wife and Daughter, 5, By His Habit of Teasing the Child, to Teach Her to 'Take It,' He Says; What Ails Him?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Will you please write something about parents teasing their children? My husband is a grand person but a terrible tease; and we have two children, the younger a girl, very much like her father, whom he teases so much that she is irritable.

John (my husband) maintains that she has to learn how to take teasing; and I agree, but we live in a neighborhood of many children and I feel she gets plenty from the other youngsters.

Jeanne is just 5 and has been teased for over two years. She has gotten to the point where she doesn't even want her father to kiss her. I have discussed it with him several times, but never in Jeanne's presence, so she doesn't know I disapprove. What should I do now?

John can't take either teasing or criticism, but perhaps if he read your opinion it might be beneficial. Incidentally, he never teases the older child. J. K.

We've Consulted Two Specialists

DEAR J. K.: Herewith are the reactions of two specialists to your problem,—a man and a woman, the one a psychoanalyst, the other a child psychologist.

On reviewing your letter with the analyst, I asked, "What motivates adult teasing of children? In essence isn't it a malicious activity?" He turned aside my questions by saying that a child psychologist was best qualified to decipher what's wrong with this family picture.

In some astonishment I reminded that the father, not the child, appears to be the obstinate instigator of friction, tormenting the child and calling it "teasing," —hence why couldn't adult psychological lore explain the father to himself. But the analyst again replied that a child psychologist was the person to consult.

Father Wants To Be Babied

SO I conferred with a child psychologist and met with another surprise in her dissertation, softly given, which freely translated holds you indirectly to blame for John's behavior, on account of you don't "mother" him to his heart's content, but rather treat the children as the only children in the family, while seeming to expect him to be a man!

This John resents, says the psychologist in effect. He identifies himself with Jeanne. In her like traits, he sees himself as a child, and in relation to you, he wishes he were she. He is jealous of the child she is in relation to you, and jealous of what she receives from you. Fancy that.

It seems he teases Jeanne—i. e., is sportively cruel to her—because "he has to get his hostilities out somehow." And when you privately exhort against this, his unconscious pout is further inflamed by your maternal shielding of the child, and his compulsive picking on her is thereby accelerated.

Not a Total Jerk, Is He?

IN DEVELOPING this diagnosis of what goes on, the doctor's tone held sympathy for John, and the gist of her feeling seemed to be that you've been falling down on your job in letting him starve for mother-love. In her opinion, the antidote to the difficulty is to beware of concentrating exclusively on the children's welfare, and treat him to an ample steady diet of tender womanly solicitude.

In conclusion I wanted to know: "How about some advice for John? Or is it too much to ask that he bestir himself to consciously improve his own performance and give his child a decent break?" My consultant ducked out on that, calling attention to another engagement, so here's passing the challenge to John, who surely can't be such a jerk as not to take himself in hand, once the significance of his teasing dawns on him.

Ask Anne:

Who Buys Flowers For Wedding?

A friend is being married and having a maid-of-honor and two bridesmaids. Does the groom buy all the flowers for them? C. P. K.

The groom usually buys only the bride's bouquet and the ushers' boutonnieres, while the bride's family buys the flowers for the bride's attendants. However, it is permissible for the groom to buy all the flowers if he wishes.

Can chintz curtains be dyed? H. D. P.

If the curtains are a solid color, you should be able to dye them with fair results. Since fabrics have to be boiled in dye bath to give them lasting color, however, you'll probably destroy some of the glaze on the chintz. They undoubtedly will not be as shiny as they were originally, although you can restore some of the body with starch. If the curtains are flowered, you'll have to dye them black or a very dark color to obscure the old design.

Can you tell me what type of wax is used on venetian blinds and white woodwork? Should I use paste or liquid wax? M. S.

Cream wax is excellent for use on white woodwork of all kinds, including venetian blinds.

I would like to know when and on what kind of floors an oil mop is used. Can it be used on waxed hardwood floors, and how often? Should I use furniture polish on hardwood steps? M. S.

Oiled mops are used on floors finished with floor oil, which is not a particularly satisfactory finish. The surface is "tacky" and dirt clings to it. Eventually the floor will darken until it is almost black. Oiled mops should not be used on waxed hardwood floors. The oil softens the wax and will leave an unabsorbed film of grease to catch dust. Instead, use a soft, untreated mop for dusting waxed floors.

Furniture polish could be used on the hardwood steps, but you'll find that wax gives greater protection to the wood and gives a more listing finish. A little buffing is all that will be needed to make the steps shine if they are waxed about twice a year.

Is there a firm in Washington which will reupholster and recover one sofa bed and take another as full or part payment? G. M. P.

I do not know of such a firm. Any suggestion, readers?

About stains on plaster walls: Such stains can be permanently covered by coating with aluminum radiator metal paint. It will not show through even light color wall paint which is put on top nor through wallpaper. Of course, the cause of staining (water seepage, etc.) should be discovered and remedied if necessary. C. S.

Home Ec Studies Lose in Favor

College girls aren't going in for home economics the way they used to, the Office of Education regretfully reported today.

The agency said that at 388 colleges and universities only 11½ per cent of the women students this year specialized in home economics.

In 1941, a similar survey showed that 17 per cent of all women students were home economics majors. In 1945 the figure was 13 per cent.

Without revealing its stand on Southern style cooking, the Federal office reported the 12 Dixie States led other regions in proportional number of home economics students.

As for future opportunities in this field, the agency said the Nation's school system needs at least 3000 or 4000 new home economics teachers each year.

D. C. Gas Sales Set New Peak In 5 Months

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday reported record gas sales of 83,371,100 therms for the first five months this year, an increase of 20.83 per cent over the same 1947 period.

Factors, according to a company spokesman, were the colder weather last winter, increased population and housing (especially in the suburban area) and sporadic shortages in other types of fuel.

The sales increase would have been greater if the gas company had not been forced to limit heating conversions earlier in the year due to near-capacity operations. Washington Gas Light Co. in recent weeks has started plans to extend its pipe line facilities in nearby Virginia to meet the rapidly-expanding gas needs in that section.

	1948	1947
January	20,487,163	14,890,841
February	21,762,899	16,057,802
March	17,453,009	16,133,861
April	13,032,428	12,247,348
May	10,635,601	9,663,585

RECORD ASSETS: Combined resources of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League set a new record of $344,444,000 as of May 31, according to Secretary F. Willson Camp. This was a gain of 43 million over the same date last year. Mortgage loans totaled 314 million dollars on May 31, a gain of 57 million for the 12 months. Savings improved 22 million to reach a peak of $28,847,000. The league has 212,000 borrowing and investing members, Camp added.

DIVIDENDS: Directors of Bank of Commerce & Savings have declared an extra dividend of $1 in addition to the regular quarterly of $2.50 a share on capital stock, payable June 30 to stock of record June 20 . . . National Bank of Washington will pay the usual semiannual dividend of $3 a share on July 1 to stock of record June 24 . . . American Security & Trust Co.'s quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent is payable July 9 to stock of record June 30 (not June 15 as erroneously stated here yesterday) . . . Second National Bank declared regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent on capital stock, payable June 30 to stock of record June 21.

RAIL SAVINGS: A special survey by Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Beane predicts sizable tax credits for railroads this year if Congress acts favorably on a bill to reduce the unemployment insurance rate from 3 per cent to ½ of 1 per cent on the first $300 a month of rail wages. The brokerage house lists the estimated net savings per common share for individual railroads, assuming this legislation is enacted. Southern Railway would save 80 cents a share, Pennsylvania Railroad 55 cents, Baltimore & Ohio 55 cents, Chesapeake & Ohio 23 cents.

ODD LOTS: Bache & Co. has compiled a list of eight corporations in the drug field with good dividend records . . . Mitchell-Hoffman & Co., Inc., has surveyed the television industry generally and three corporations specifically . . . Dun & Bradstreet's wholesale food index rose to $7.18 on June 15, only 1.4 per cent under the all-time high of $7.28 established on January 13 . . . A new heating unit has been developed that uses coal or oil, by a flip of a switch . . . Platinum price this week was slashed $13 an ounce . . . American Fire Insurance Co., Washington, today will mark its seventh-fifth anniversary.

BANK FIGURES: Highlights of Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond's weekly report on 17 member Washington banks:

	Week Ended June 9	Week Ended June 2
Total loans	$226,414,000	$226,929,000
Real estate loans	73,776,000	73,691,000
Total assets	986,790,000	976,464,000
Demand deposits	737,208,000	726,785,000
Time deposits	184,402,000	184,780,000

EXPANDS: Trans World Airline yesterday put into service seven new Constellations and stepped up its overseas schedules to 44 flights weekly. Five more sleeper-type Constellations are expected before September. The four-engine airliners bring Paris within 16 hours of Washington, Lisbon 18 hours, Rome 23 hours and Cairo 30 hours.

STORY: A Washington brokerage house once outsmarted itself, according to the grapevine. Here's the story: Supreme Court Justice John M. Harlan sometimes discussed pending cases in his lectures at Georgetown University. A local house stationed a lawyer in the class, hoping to garner some advance hints on court decisions which might affect the stock market. Everything went according to Hoyle. The justice disclosed his conclusions in an important pending case; the broker's lawyer counseled his firm to play the market to fit the anticipated ruling. But the firm lost heavily because the decision had been contrary to the lawyer's expectation. When the lawyer anxiously sought the printed decision, he was struck by a single line at the bottom, which read: "Mr. Justice Harlan dissents."

CANNED GOLD: There is another commodity you can get in cans—gold. A Colorado company is advertising in New York that it will sell gold in cans holding 500 to 1000 ounces. This is gold in its natural state, either dust or nugget, and its sale and possession is reported legal. In the West the canned gold has been sold for some time at reported prices of $40 to $42 an ounce. Since the Treasury pays $35 an ounce, purchasers of the cans are presumably of the opinion it may go up in price later, or like to have it around the house because of worry about currency inflation.

Vegetable Oil Prices Decline

New York, June 16 (AP).—Vegetable oil prices declined further today following a sharp break yesterday. Brokers said buyers generally were holding off purchasing in anticipation of still lower levels.

Limited sales of crude cottonseed oil for immediate delivery were made in Texas at 33 cents a pound—off 1½ from yesterday's lowest level. Further offerings were reported.

There were offerings of crude soybean oil at prices from ¼ to 1¼ cents below yesterday, but no sales were confirmed. On a Decatur, Ill., basis, the oil was available at 27 cents for nearby delivery, 25 cents for July delivery and 23½ for August.

Crude peanut oil sold at 33 cents, off 2 cents a pound, and crude corn oil was quoted at 33 cents nominal, also off 2 cents.

SEC Sets Fraud Hearing For Brokerage Firm

By The Associated Press

The New York stock brokerage firm of Edward R. Parker Co., Inc., was charged by the Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday with practices which "would and did operate as a fraud and deceit" upon investors.

The commission ordered a hearing on June 28 to "develop the facts" and determine whether the company's broker-dealer registration with the SEC should be revoked.

The commission charged that information obtained in a private investigation by its staff "tends to show" that the Parker company did business "while insolvent and while representing that it was in excellent financial condition."

General Electric To Increase Prices

New York, June 16 (AP).—The General Electric Co. is immediately increasing prices on a variety of consumer and industrial products, Charles E. Wilson, president, announced at a news conference today.

The advances range from 5 to an extreme of 12 per cent, Wilson said.

Wage increases, plus higher freight rates and material costs, forced the move, Wilson stated. The company last week offered the United Electrical Workers a wage boost of nine to 15 cents an hour.

B. & O. Will Get 160 Diesel Locomotives

New York, June 16 (AP).—The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad expects delivery of 160 new diesel-electric locomotives this year, President Roy B. White announced after a regular board of directors meeting here today.

White said they would approximately double the road's diesel fleet, which will constitute nearly 15 per cent of the B. & O.'s motive power by 1949.

100-Year Firm Makes Last Steam Locomotive

Schenectady, N. Y., June 16 (NYHT).—The end of an era in railroading was marked here today when the last steam locomotive to come from the century-old shops of the American Locomotive Co. chugged away under its own power. All facilities of the company were turned immediately to Diesel-electric production. American Locomotive produced about 75,000 steam units in 100 years, officials said.

New Philco Sales Head

Philadelphia, June 16 (AP).—John M. Otter has been elected vice president and general sales manager of the Philco Corp., it was announced today by James H. Carmine, vice president, distribution of the corporation.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, June 16 (AP).—Grains moved ahead steadily on the Board of Trade today, both wheat and corn ending with gains extending to more than 2 cents. Soybeans and lard were firm in sympathy with the strength shown by grains.

In most cases opening prices were the day's lows. From the start the trend was upward, although it was a slow climb. Reactions were few and unimportant. At the final bell many grain deliveries were at their day's highs.

Wheat ended 1⅞-2¾ higher, July 2.31@2.31⅛; corn was 1⅛-2⅛ higher, July 2.20¼@2.20½; oats were ⅜ to 1 cent higher, July 94⅞@94½, and soybeans were ½ to 4 cents higher, July 4.11.

Some of the buying in all grains was based on overnight actions of the Senate in restoring most of the cuts which the House had made in the Foreign Aid Bill. If the cuts had been maintained, lower grain exports were almost certain, analysts said.

New York Cotton

New York, June 16 (AP).—Cotton futures closed 50 cents a bale higher to 25 cents lower today. Price movements were narrow and influenced principally by the action of nearby July futures. Recurrent flurries of liquidation in nearby July discouraged rallying tendencies in the market, although distant deliveries held steady and were near the probable loan price on the next cotton crop.

Reserve Group Urges Total Mobilization

Denver, June 16 (AP).—The president of the Reserve Officers Association called today for total mobilization, on a civilian basis.

Col. William H. Neblett presented this seven-point program at the opening session of the four-day national ROA convention.

1. The Department of Defense should immediately organize reserve units in every community.

2. Congress should provide for "a single unfied citizen military force in which service will be made compulsory."

3. The organized reserves, National Guards and civilian defense units should be combined in a single force.

4. A system of universal military training should be started with training at or near trainees homes and assignments to local units.

5. Local units, through rotation of assignments, be prepared for offense or defense on a 24-hour basis.

6. "All our people, regardless of age or sex, be given an assignment in this force, whether it be military or industrial or both."

7. Education in security should be started in the schools and continued through college with emphasis on electronics, physics and chemistry.

40 Veterans Ask Cars Be Supplied 8700 Amputees

Forty World War II amputees yesterday appealed — apparently vainly—to Congress to provide cars for their less fortunate fellow veterans.

These 40 were veterans who had been supplied with cars. They asked Congress to pass a measure sponsored by Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (R., Mass.) to supply funds for cars for some 8700 other veterans who had lost one or both limbs in the war.

Mrs. Rogers has been fighting for a place on the crowded House calendar for her bill. A companion measure was passed a year ago by the Senate.

"Billions for Europe—millions for farmers—nothing for the disabled veteran," Mrs. Rogers commented bitterly.

Clark Hails Court Rule Dissolving Mortgage Group

New York, June 16 (AP).—A Federal judge today ordered the Mortgage Conference of New York dissolved, a step which Attorney General Tom Clark termed "helpful in eliminating other restrictive practices" in the Nation's real estate operations.

In a final judgment dissolving the conference, Judge John C. Knox enjoined 33 savings bank, trust and insurance company members from making agreements to fix interest rates, mortgage terms or other restrictive mortgage loan practices in the New York City area.

The judgement, entered into with consent of the Government, the conference and its members, ends a Sherman antitrust civil suit filed August 6, 1946. The original complaint charged the defendants conspired to end competition in the city real estate market.

House Again Bars Fund to Begin TVA Steam Plant

By The Associated Press

The House refused again yesterday to agree t oa four-million-dollar appropriation to begin construction of a TVA steam electric plant at New Johnsonville, Tenn.

The Senate voted the initial construction outlay Tuesday night after the House refused May 11 to add any money for the plant to the Government corporation's appropriation bill.

When the measure was returned to the House yesterday, it was sent to a Senate-House conference committee to settle differences between the two branches.

Spaker Martin (R., Mass.) named the following conferees for the House: Representatives Ploesser (R., Mo.), Jensen (R., Iowa), Coudert (R., N. Y.), Clevenger (R., Ohio), Whitten (D., Miss.), and Gore (D., Tenn.).

In both the House and Senate, proponents of the plant, which would cost 54 million dollars to complete, argued that the Tennessee Valley Authority needs the new power to "firm up" and supplement its hydroelectric output.

Deficiency Bill For U. S. Agencies Passed by House

The last appropriations bill of this session of Congress, a $485,204,240 measure carrying deficiency funds for some two dozen Federal agencies, was passed by the House yesterday and sent to the Senate.

The House earlier defeated, 204 to 198, a motion to send it back to committee with instructions to include another $450,000 for the Rural Electrification Administration.

The House trimmed $113,127,853 from the $598,332,095 that President Truman requested for the various agencies.

The Senate, which already is faced with a backlog of House-passed money bills, must act on the measure before Congress adjourns Saturday for the national political conventions.

The bill grants the agencies about 300 million dollars in contract authorizations, most of which will be used for Army and Navy construction in Alaska and Guam.

FlemmingSays U. S. Activities Could Be Cut

Some Federal Government activities no longer are necessary and could be eliminated, Arthur S. Flemming, Civil Service Commissioner, said yesterday.

Flemming, however, did not specify which functions might be pared. He spoke at the opening session of the conference of the Washington Chapter of the Society for the Advancement of Management.

Calling for more emphasis on training of Government employes, Flemming said it is necessary to "squelch the interest of administrators in papers and reports and inspire an interest on their part in human beings."

Officials and management experts addressed the conference on methods of improving Government management at sessions in the Archives auditorium. The conference closes tonight with a dinner at the Annapolis Hotel at 6:30 o'clock when new officers will be installed.

At last night's session, Gen. Willard S. Paul, director of personnel for the Army General Staff; Leon H. Keyserling, of the President's Economic Council; Dwight Jacobus, plant personnel manager of McCormick & Co., Baltimore; Alfred H. Hausrath, director of scientific personnel of the Office of Naval Research; Lillian M. Gilbreth, management engineer; and Representative Edward H. Rees (R., Kans.), took part in a panel discussion on "The Key to Lost Manpower."

Reds Reject U. S. Protest

Seoul, Korea (Thursday), June 17 (U.P.).—Russia today flatly rejected an American protest against Communist action in cutting off flow of power into American-occupied south Korea.

"I can tell you why cool ELECTRIC RANGES have P.A.!"

"When a range wins a MAN around to cooking during the hot weather, you can bet that range is a cool operator . . . like our Electric! Since millions of folks want cool kitchens, this is one of the big reasons why Electric ranges have Public Acceptance . . . P. A.! I say coolness ranks right along with the fact that the range does the real work. Automatic timer, accurate heat regulator keeps everything under control. Vitamins are sealed in. There's no "watching." I get fine food EVERY time.

"While this is going on, our kitchen stays safe, clean, COOL, because the whole business is flameless. Don't let anybody tell you cool comfort isn't tops when he cooks! And another advantage that's important to me is the low cost of operation."

"Folks, these Electric ranges EARNED P. A.!"

Rain, Rain, Go Away And Don't Hurry Back

Jim Wilfong, jr., of 1541 Montana ave. ne., answers my complaints about the recent abundance of rain by reminding me that "Into each life a little rain must fall."

But what I want to know is why does it invariably do its falling when I have an afternoon off.

The jinx has gotten so bad lately that I'm thinking of making myself a barrel of money by touring the drought areas and, for a substantial fee, opening up the heavens with the magic words:

"I think I'll play a little golf this afternoon."

Lieut. Hogge regrets that the item failed to explain whether the "handicapped" being aided by this measure are the women or the Army.

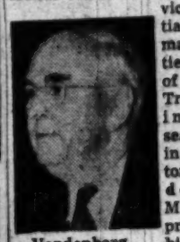
The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Rank of Vandenberg Held Secure

By Drew Pearson

(Editor's Note—Senator Arthur Vandenberg, No. 1 dark horse of the Republican Party today, is analyzed in Drew Pearson's columns on GOP candidates for President.)

After the Cleveland GOP convention finished nominating Alf Landon for President in 1936, they looked round anxiously for a good vice presidential running mate. Col. Bertie McCormick of The Chicago Tribune, joining in the search, dropped in to see Senator Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan to propose putting his name in nomination.



Vandenberg

"Let me ask you one question," replied Vandenberg. "How would you like to be vice president of anything?"

The matter was dropped. Much to McCormick's disgust, his rival, Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, was nominated instead.

At that time Vandenberg was a staunch isolationist and the apple of Colonel McCormick's eye. Today the colonel cartoons him on the front page of the Tribune as "The Benedict Arnold of the Republican Party."

At that time also, there was nothing Vandenberg wanted more than to be President of the United States. He was a dark horse in 1936, again in 1940, and again in 1944.

Today, Arthur Vandenberg could probably have the Republican nomination.

Now Well Seasoned

The career of Arthur Vandenberg shows that, despite all the emphasis on younger blood in politics, age has its assets; that the Stassens and the Deweys sometimes have to season before they become statesmen.

A few years ago Vandenberg was a mixture of bumptious pomposity nicknamed the "Kemal Pasha" of the Young Turks, whose Senate antics nearly cost him reelection in Michigan. Campaigning to keep his Senate seat in 1934, Van told his friend, Harry Toy, now police commissioner of Detroit: "We'd better be frank and tell this crowd tonight that I'm licked."

Toy, however, urged Van not to give up the fight. And the next day none other than Franklin Roosevelt inadvertently came to his opponent's rescue. Vandenberg was relected by the scant margin of 5000 votes.

Van Learned Lesson

It has taken the Senator from Michigan a long time to learn some things, but he has learned them well. His mistakes, however, have been many.

It was not long ago, for instance, that he was not only the darling of the Chicago Tribune, but of rabble-rouser Gerald L. K. Smith, even wrote long letters to Smith pointing out that there were no basic differences between their points of view. It was no later than 1943 at the Mackinac Island Republican conference that Van outlined a strong isolationist platform for the party. And in 1939, one month after Hitler invaded Poland, the Senator from Michigan told the world:

"This so-called war is nothing but about 25 people and propaganda. Get them and you'll have the whole thing. They want our money and our men."

At the San Francisco Conference which organized the United Nations, Vandenberg was just as strong for the veto as Comrade Molotov. In fact, had it not been for the consistent battling of Australia's Foreign Minister Evatt and other small nations, the veto would be even more unworkable than it is today.

In brief, there was little about Vandenberg similar to the long-range statesmanship of a much younger Senator from Arkansas who, six years before, introduced the Fulbright resolution putting the United States on record for international cooperation.

Genuine Leader

However, we are dealing with the present, not the past. And unquestionably the fact that Vandenberg has seen the light, makes him all the more effective. He can speak from experience. People listen when he tells the isolationists how wrong they are.

And today, he is, beyond question, the most influential leader in the Republican Party.

On internal problems, the Senator from Michigan has frequently taken his cue from the General Motors clique which dominates his State, or from Arthur Summerfield, GOP National Committeeman and president of the Detroit auto dealers who now face a grand jury probe over the manner in which he raised GOP money. Locally also, Van has not been averse to accepting support from the powerful Frank McKay racetrack and gambling ring. Though a matter of political expediency, this wedding does not bear too close inspection.

These, however, are not the factors now being considered by Republican leaders as they approach the Philadelphia convention. What they have in mind are two things: (1) The Senator's age and health. (2) Can they control Vandenberg

The answer to point two is that when it came to domestic policy—the chief concern of the politicians—Van would be amenable to reason. On foreign policy he would be his own boss.

Regarding point number one, the Senator is 64, the same age as President Truman. Although he complains of violent headaches and has to travel at a slower pace than formerly, he also amazes colleagues by the strength and virility he shows during hour-long Senate speeches.
